

ABANDON HOPE FOR ENTOMBED

Fourteen Miners Are Taken Out Alive Today

SIXTEEN BODIES
ARE DISCOVERED

Men Are Horribly Burned and Blackened.

Whole Interior of Mine Is Wrecked and Rescue Is Difficult—Fire Is Feared by Experts—Sent Out by Government—Relatives of Entombing Miners Crowd About Mine Waiting for News.

McCutain, Okla., March 21.—
Fourteen men entombed in the San Boise mine, No. 2, following the explosion and fire of yesterday, were taken out alive shortly before noon
today.

The rescued men were on the ninth level behind a barrier of tons of rock and earth. The rescuers, who had worked desperately since eight, penetrated the barrier shortly before noon. Near the end of their work, they heard tappings behind the wall of rock. Renewing their attack, they worked in short sniffs with desperate energy and in a few minutes had made their way into a part of the passage that had been screened off by one of the freaks of the explosion.

Had Given Up Hope.

The men looped in this narrow passageway had given up hope. They were nearly exhausted when the rescuers broke in. The men were helped through the narrow opening to the shaft where they were gently lifted on the cars and taken to the shaft house. Their relatives and friends, who had been pushed back by the mine officials earlier in the day, made a rush for the entrance.
The miners were surrounded by their relatives and friends and there was a scene of confusion until the doctors ordered every one back and the men were given emergency treatment.

All Will Recover.

All of them will recover though they were partially overcome by the gas that filled the mine following the explosion.

Twenty-five bodies had been removed from the mine at noon. They were blackened and charred and many of them were mutilated by the explosion. In many cases identification will be difficult.

Dead Are Described.

The row of bodies lying in one of the old buildings of the mine and surrounded by grief-stricken relatives of the miners anxious for some definite news of the fate of their loved ones, was deserted when the fourteen survivors were led out.

There were 116 men in the mine at the time of the explosion. In all twenty-seven men have been rescued.
Those in charge of the rescue work today say that all hope of bringing out any others alive is futile. This places the number of dead at eighty-nine.

Search for Bodies.

McCutain, Okla., March 21.—
That 105 men met their death in the disaster that wrecked the San Boise mine No. 2, was the belief today of Superintendent Brown, when,
at daylight, a party of rescuers went into the mine in search for the bodies of the men. Government mine experts, who arrived last night, shared the superintendent's view after a hasty survey of the mine.

Only eleven of the 116 miners at work when the explosion occurred escaped. It is believed that none of the others can be alive. Forty-three are Americans. So certain were the mine officials that the men are beyond human aid that a train-load of physicians and nurses that came from Fort Smith, Arkansas, to care for the injured has been sent back and only five physicians left to render aid that might be needed.
Seventy-five coffins were sent here from Fort Smith.

Sixteen Bodies Found.

The rescue party that entered the mine today expected first to bring out the charred bodies of sixteen men found in a heap near the entrance of the eighth level. The bodies were discovered late last night on the last trip made by the rescue party. The men were horribly burned and blackened, some of them mangled as though torn by the explosion and the rescuers were horror-stricken at the sight.

At the entrance to the mine, crowded as close around as the officials and guards will permit, the relatives of the entombed men waited throughout the night. They watched silently while the rescuers worked the shaft to resume the systematic work of clearing the mine and saving the chambers where the men were believed to be.

Difficult Work.

Rescue from the rescue today

said the work was extremely difficult. The whole interior of the mine is wrecked and their work is proceeding slowly for fear falling rocks will cut off the entrances to the various levels. Temporary props are being erected to support the roof as the rescuers work their way in.

Most of the men were at work on the ninth level. The entrance to the level is blocked by a great heap of debris sufficiently to allow the rescuers to creep back toward the chambers and passages in which it is believed the miners are imprisoned. The rescuers worked under the Fort Smith. The rescue party is made up largely of the night shift
at the mine, the men who had gone off duty shortly before the explosion occurred. They are working in relays of fifty men each. Being familiar with the men, they have an advantage over the other men who are in the party.

Fire Is Feared.

Fear that fire may cause the suspension of rescue work was expressed today. Fire broke out shortly after the explosion, but the smoke ceased pouring out of the shaft after a time. Whether the flames are working in the closed levels back of the heap of rocks and earth that blocked the entrance of the rescuers had not been determined today.

The greatest force of the explosion was in the ninth level where most of the men were at work. Those who escaped were doing special tasks on other levels. On the eighth, a badly mangled body was found. It was near this that the rescuers expected to find the sixteen dead bodies when they entered the workings today.

It is feared that the dead miners have been horribly crushed and burned. The bodies already taken out were so charred that identification of most of them has been impossible. Only one, John Cowles, seventeen year old, the first discovered, was recognized. He had been at work on one of the higher levels.

WOMAN WILL FACE ACCUSERS

Mrs. Grace Denies She Will Skip Country.

SAYS SHE IS STILL DEVOTED TO HUSBAND

Declares the Truth Is Bound To Come Out.

Woman Accused of Shooting Husband in Their Atlanta Home, Is in Philadelphia, Where She Goes Immediately on Being Released from Jail—Lawyer Declares He Will Produce Her When Necessary.

Philadelphia, March 21.—Mrs.
Daisy Grace arrived here at 3:40
a. m. today and went to a downtown hotel. Under cover of darkness, she slipped away from the station with her attorney, J. A. Branch, who had aided in her flight to secure release from the Atlanta jail on bail, and insetad of proceeding to the home of her mother, she took refuge in a hotel. Mrs. Grace and Branch were located later and were shown dispatches from Atlanta to the effect that the prosecution feared that Mrs.
Grace would leave the country and not face trial.

Mrs. Grace entered an indignant denial. "I shall return to Atlanta to face my accusers as soon as I can straighten out my affairs here," she declared. "I am innocent of the charge of shooting Grace and absolutely have no fear of the outcome.
I have absolutely no idea of leaving the country or of attempting to evade trial in any way."

"Mrs. Grace left Atlanta without any attempt at concealment," said Mr. Branch, "and is here on a business mission."

"On Tuesday in Atlanta," Mr.
Branch said, "I took up with Justice Ridley, before whom the warrant was sworn out, the question of assessing bail on bond. Mrs. Grace had been in the Atlanta jail ten days without bail, and the crime for which the warrant against her was issued—the warrant charged her with intention to murder—is a bailable offense. This I insisted on before Justice Ridley."

"In the face of the opposition of Mr. Hill, one of the prosecuting attorneys in the case, Justice Ridley fixed at $7,500, and four hours later, about 11 p. m., Mrs.
Grace was on her way here to attend to pressing business affairs."

"I promised that Mrs. Grace in event of her husband's death would immediately surrender herself to the authorities and I stand by that promise."

Mrs. Grace said: "I tell you the truth is going to come out. Should my husband be dying he will tell the truth. I am still devoted to him.
If he has said the things attributed to him he is being prejudiced by his family, but I don't believe he did say them, nor do I believe he is dying."

SNOW COMES WITH SPRING

And a Cold Wave Is Closely Following.

A BLIZZARD RAGES
THROUGHOUT WEST

The Storm Will Reach Ohio
Tomorrow.

Telegraph and Telephone Wires Are Generally Prostrated and Railroad Traffic Is Demoralized in Number of Places—East Reported in Grip of Sleet Storm, Snow and Rain Freezing, Coating Everything.

Chicago, March 21.—The spring blizzard that yesterday swept the Middle West has swept eastward today. In its wake is a path of snow and sleet with cold weather and another storm threatened. Railroads throughout the West are delayed, wires are down and heavy damage is reported from sleet and wind.

In St. Louis, the weather is cold and cloudy. In Chicago, the sharp wind that blew during yesterday's storm has died down and the snow has ceased falling except in fitful flurries. Sleet topped off the snow just before the storm stopped and the streets are glazed with ice. Throughout Illinois, a heavy fall of snow is reported, but the snow has ceased today. One of the heaviest snows of the season fell in Iowa, Nebraska and Minnesota.

Lines Are Crippled.

Columbus, O., March 21.—Telegraph and telephone wires were generally prostrated and railroad traffic was greatly demoralized by the severe sleet and snowstorm prevailing throughout the middle central states today.

At 8 o'clock all wires from Chicago south and west were down, while only two or three remained standing between Chicago and eastern points. Ohio cities suffered severely and for the most part were cut off from telegraphic communication with the rest of the world.

All wires into Dayton, Cincinnati and Indianapolis had failed at that hour. The storm gave no promise of relenting.

Condition in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., March 21.—The first day of spring in Buffalo was marked by a snow and wind storm almost as severe as the worst blizard of the winter. The temperature took a decided drop and reached about ten degrees above zero.
Trolley traffic was badly handicapped on account of the big snow drifts in the streets.

Spring Gets Setback.

New Haven, Conn., March 21.—
With the thermometer twelve degrees and more below the freezing point and a young blizzard raging, spring got a severe setback throughout Connecticut this morning. Heavy snow fell during the night and this morning turned to sleet along the coast.

Blizzard Hits Valley.

Utica, N. Y., March 21.—With a temperature of eighteen above zero,
a blizzard struck the Mohawk valley last night and today continued in force. The fall of snow reached seven inches last night and in the open sections has drifted to several feet.

In Rochester.

Rochester, N. Y., March 21.—
Fully eight inches of snow fell during the night and this morning, making one of the heaviest falls of the winter. Street traffic is much impeded and car service almost at a standstill.

Mercury Takes Drop.

Boston, March 21.—The first day of spring was ushered in here with two inches of snow. The mercury dropped to twenty above zero, and it was a typical midwinter day.

EATING CORNED BEEF

City Chemist of Cleveland To Examine Cooking Utensils.

Cleveland, O., March 21.—City
Chemist Taussig will go to the Correction farm at Warrensville today and examine the cooking utensils in which the food is prepared for the prisoners there, with the hope of discovering the cause of the widespread suffering among the men from ptomaine poisoning. While it is believed today that none of the prisoners would die from the effects of the poisoning, scores were confined to their cots under the direct supervision of physicians. Hash containing corned beef, hamburger steak, potatoes and onions fed to the men two days ago was believed to have caused their illness.

STANDARD TO CUT A HUGE "MELON"

Big Dividends To Be Paid Out by Indiana Corporation.

Whiting, Ind., March 21.—Announcement of the cutting of a $29-000,000 "melon" by the Standard Oil company of Indiana was made here today. A stock dividend of 290,000 shares with a par value of $100 per share has been declared.
This dividend follows recent action of the company in increasing the capital stock from $1,000,000 to $20,000,000. The stock under the old capitalization has sold as high as $6.000 per share.

HOME OF OUTLAW SIDNA ALLEN AND FIGURES IN HILLSVILLE SHOOTING

The picture on the right of the group shows the palatial $20,000 home of Sidna Allen, a member of the notorious Allen gang that shot up the Hillsville, Virginia, "courthouse recently and killed the judge, district attorney, sheriff, a juror and wounded several others. This "mountain hut" is situated in the fastness of the Virginia mountains, twelve miles from any town, and is believed to have been erected with money obtained through the manufacture of "moonshine" whiskey.
The pictures in the upper row, left to right, are: Henry Allen, a cousin of Floyd Allen, the convicted bandit who shot and killed Judge Massie; Miss Jezebel Goad, court recorder and daughter of Clerk Dexter Goad, who was mortally wounded in the murderous raid of Allen's cohorts; Goad, the wounded court clerk, is shown in the lower right, while District Attorney Williams, of Virginia, who will probably act as prosecuting attorney at the trial of Floyd Allen, is shown

FUGITIVES ELUDE THE DETECTIVES

The Allen Gang Still Among the Hills.

MAY SLIP CLEAR
OUT OF COUNTRY

Allens Lead Posses in a Perfect
Circle.

Virginians Save Themselves a Long
Forced March by Tactics—Posses Fear Being Ambushed—The Wily Mountaineers, If Cornered, Will Fight to Death Rather Than Surrender to Officers.

Hillsville, Va., March 21.—Although the shooting up of the Carroll county court by the outlawed Allen gang occurred just one week ago today, the gang is still uncap-tured and reports reaching here today from the latest stand of the mountaineers at Chestnut Ridge stated that the fugitives were in a position to slip away as soon as the pursuing posse got within striking distance. Chestnut Ridge is a spur in the Blue Ridge mountains, barely more than five miles from the scene of the courthouse murders.
The mountaineers, aided through their intimate knowledge of the rugged country, have led the posses
a chase in a circle, saving themselves a long-forced march, yet wearing out the pursuers who are forced to take roundabout courses for fear of being ambushed.

To Fight to Death.

Realizing that it is now a case of fight or unconditional surrender, the mountaineers have prepared to put off a battle until they are actually cornered. Then a bloody conflict is expected.

The number of victims may reach six before night, according to physicians, who are attending Andrew P. Howell, a bystander, who was wounded in the courthouse. His condition is critical.

Detective Felt and Baldwin have established a strict censorship over the messages which pass over the telephone line between Hillsville and the outside world. This is a party line, with extensions into the home of persons friendly to the Allen and the detectives forbid the passage of messages which might betray their plans into hostile hands.

To Reach Jury Friday.

Chicago, March 21.—The packers case will go to the jury Friday.

A QUADRUPE SUICIDE PACT

Stirs Members of Two Noble
Italian Families.

MARQUESE, COUNT AND SWEETHEARTS DEAD

Officials Are Making a Rigid Investigation.

Theory Is Formulated That the Tragedies Are Outcome of Parental Decree Forbidding the Young Nobles
To Wed Women, Whom Families Believe Below Their Station—How the Four Die.

Naples, March 21.—Royal carbineers, the national police of Italy, are engaged in the investigation of a quadruple suicide pact, wide in its interest because the two male victims were both members of ancient and noble Italian families.

Marquis Salvatore Volpicelli, a member of an old Neapolitan family and his sweetheart, Fraulin Josephine Adams, a German actress, who had spent many years in America, were found dead in a room in the Hotel Rizzogimento in this city.

Count Barbera, a member of a Ulled Padua family and his fiancée, Signorina Maria Scaretzi, were found shot to death upon the shore of Lake Garda in western Venetia.

Theory of Officers.

From the investigation as far as it has proceeded, the officials have formulated the theory that the tragedies were the outcome of a parental decree forbidding the young nobles from wedding the women, who were considered beneath their station.

Though the two tragedies occurred 400 miles apart, both the noblemen were close friends. In the first tragedy, Fraulin Adams had shot her lover to death. In the second, Count Barbera killed his sweetheart and then took his own life. It is learned that the two nobles were madly infatuated with the women and had vowed to take their lives
if forbidden to marry.

Views of Friends.

Friends of the couple declare that the families of the two men had been for weeks trying to persuade them to join their regiments in Tripoli in hope that they would forget their attachments. But the men held love higher than patriotism and instead of hastening off to war, secured furloughs and remained at home to be near their sweethearts.

Both families are trying to hush
up the details of the affair.

No Funds for Pension.

London, March 21.—A dispatch from Tien Tsin states that President Yuan Shi Kai has refused to pay the pension of the deposed emperor for this month on the ground that the funds are lacking.

BALFOUR AGAIN IN THE FIGHT

Opposes Minimum Wage Bill of Asquith.

PARLIAMENTARY
BATTLE WAGED

Balfour Insists Measure Be Rejected.

Former Leader of the Unionists Declares Premier's Wage Bill Fails To Meet Needs of Situation Which Has Arisen from National Coal Strike—Downfall of English Cabinet Hinted—Crisis Near.

London, March 21.—The parliamentary battle of the minimum wage bill was brought to a climax today.
Premier Asquith, who introduced the measure Tuesday, moved a second reading shortly after the house of commons convened, but he immediately met a storm of opposition by A. J. Balfour, former leader of the Unionists.

Mr. Balfour moved that the bill be rejected, saying it failed to meet the needs of the situation which has arisen from the national coal strike.
Balfour was backed up by other Unionist members, who declared the government was making a grave mistake and that the bill was unfair to the mine owners and the people alike.
It was branded a makeshift measure to tide the United Kingdom over the present labor crisis.

Interpellation of the premier followed. Upon being asked whether the miners had agreed to return to work if the bill were enacted, Mr.
Asquith said no such assurance had been given.

Sees Great Peril.

In crying down the bill, Mr. Balfour, in his address to the house of commons, said the government was deceiving both itself and the people.
"Never has the country been brought face to face with a peril of such magnitude," said Balfour. "This bill is a futile measure and holds out no prospects for a settlement of the mine strike. Not only are we dissatisfied, but the leaders of one of the parties to the dispute in question are by no means satisfied with the proposal in the measure."

Fight On in Earnest.

London, March 21.—The fight to amend the minimum wage bill as the government's instrument for terminating the national coal strike
so as to make it conform more closely with the demands of British miners and operators, began in earnest
today.

Members of the executive committee of the Federated Miners' union conferred with labor members of parliament during the morning and drew up amendments providing for a fixed minimum wage of $1.25 per day for adult underground workers and fifty cents a day for boys.

The operators also decided upon the amendments which they desire attached to the bill to insure a maximum output for the minimum wage.

Cabinet May Fall.

The coal situation has become fraught with political possibilities and in many quarters the belief is openly expressed that the downfall of the cabinet will be the outcome of the government's intervention in the strike. The prophesy is made that a general election will soon follow. At a cabinet council the government leaders agreed to stand by their guns and preparations were made to resist the attacks upon the bill from the Unionists.

The crisis has had the effect of bringing A. J. Balfour, former leader of the opposition in commons, to the front again as a factor. Mr.
Balfour assumed leadership of the element most bitterly opposing passage of the measure.

CONTINUE ATTACKS
FROM THE CLOUDS

Italians Determined To Win War by Aid of Balloons.

Tripoli, March 21.—Two Italian dirigible balloons, trailing huge volumes of black smoke from exploding bombs in their wake, made another aerial sortie upon the Turco-Arab camp on the oasis of Zanzur today. One of the exploding grenades struck a hospital, killing three wounded soldiers and wounding a baby. Thirty bombs in all were hurled upon the camp.

This attack followed two sorties made yesterday when bombs were dropped upon a native village, killing four non-combatants and wounding ten others.

On the second trip, the balloons were met by a heavy rifle fire which caused them to swerve off in the direction of this city. The Italians are now making daily attacks from the sky and evidently intend to win the war.

THE HULK OF THE ILL FATED BATTLESHIP MAINE, IS

And impressive as all ceremonies, the hulk of the ill-fated Battleship Maine, which was lifted from her muddy grave in Havana harbor was today sent to her final resting place at the bottom of the ocean. As the hulk of what was once a fine fighting craft slowly sank from sight taps were sounded. The upper portion is the hulk of the Maine as she

LITTLE VICTIM OF FALL DIES LAST SATURDAY

Jesse Kraner Falls Sixteen Feet
and Fractures Skull.

AN ACCIDENT ON THE GUTHRY FARM

Lad is Teasing a Dog and Walking on a Beam When He Falls.
Child Never Recovers Consciousness—An Operation is Performed, but Proves Futile.While teasing a dog in a barn on the William Guthry farm, eight miles southwest of the city on the Ray-Uncahner pike, Friday afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock, fifteen-year-old Jesse Kraner fell sixteen feet from a log beam to the cement flooring and fractured his skull. He died without regaining consciousness Saturday morning at 4 o'clock.The lad is a son of Mr. and Mrs.
Edward Kraner, residing a quarter of a mile west of the Guthry place,
on which Frank and John Oesterly are tenants. He went to play with the Oesterly boy and the last seen of him before the accident he was on one of the big beams shouting at a dog which was in a wagon in the barn. The canine was running back and forth in the wagon and barking. John Oesterly, who found the unconscious boy, was working near, but says he did not hear him fall on account of the noise being made by the dog. Several minutes after the dog ceased its barking he went into the barn and saw in the dim light the motionless form lying some distance away from the wagon in which the dog had been barking. Mr. Oesterly carried the lad into the house.Dr. J. G. McNamara, of Green
Camp, was called, as was also Dr.
E. Culbertson, of Agosta. They arrived about 2 o'clock, and an examination of the boy's injuries disclosed that the skull was broken to the extent of about two inches, and that piece of bone was embedded in the brain. An operation to save the injured lad's life was determined upon and Dr. A. Rhu, of this city, was notified. He arrived at the Guthry farm about 4 o'clock and performed the operation of removing the piece of broken skull from the brain.Besides his parents, the dead youth is survived by three sisters and one brother. They are Mrs. Kline Pollock, residing north of Marion;
Clara and Inez, who live at home;
and Ralph Kraner, also residing at home.The funeral services were held at the Agosta M. E. church, Monday afternoon, at 12:30 o'clock, Rev. J.
E. Sutton, of LaRue, and Rev. T.
J. Carey, of Agosta, officiating. Interment was made in the Agosta cemetery.

They Are Found at Local Hotel
Saturday Morning.

LADS HAVE MONEY AND ARE WELL ARMED

Are Located by the Local Police Who Are Searching for a Couple of Runaways from Akron—Story of Their Travels—Some Police Court Items.Jerome Loretz and Herman Schneider, aged thirteen and fourteen years, respectively, were aroused from their slumbers at the Hotel Nordica, at an early hour
Saturday by Officer Slagle and Powell, and taken to police headquarters. The boys were arrested on suspicion of being the two boys who ran away from their home in Akron,
last Saturday night.When searched at police headquarters the lads had in their possession ten boxes of twenty-two caliber cartridges, a thirty-two-caliber revolver with all the chambers loaded, $7.50 in money, a wrench, fishing tackle, duck caller, some toilet articles and miscellaneous junk. When questioned the boys stated to the officers that they ran away from their homes in Norwalk, last Monday, but did not say where they were headed for.The Loretz boy, who wore short trousers, is a son of Mr. and Frank Loretz. The father of the boy is a mail carrier and resides at No. 271 east Main street, Norwalk. The Schneider boy, who is large for his age, is a son of George Schneider, of No. 272 west Main street. His father is employed in the Wheeling shops. The father of the Loretz boy has been scouring the vicinity of Norwalk in search for his son.The police chief of Norwalk was notified Saturday morning of the arrest and detention of the boys. He informed Chief McDonough that the father of the Loretz boy was in Bucyrus Saturday, and that he would notify him to some her. The boys spent Monday night about four miles from Norwalk where they camped in a grove. They spent Thursday night in a hay stack between Bucyrus and Marion and came to this city Friday evening. They left their homes on bicycles and carried a rifle, but disposed of their bicycles
in Bucyrus, and traded the rifle there for a rifle which they said they pawed here.The father of the Loretz boy arrived here from Bucyrus shortly before the noon hour and after redeeming the rifle pawed by the two runaways, here, he returned with them to Bucyrus to secure the bicycles which the boys sold at that place. He gave the boys a nice talk.
Both broke into tears and stated that they were sorry for their actions.The hall in the John Hanley block,
at the corner of State and Farming streets, was closed Saturday by Chief McDonough. The hall was rented and has been used as a mis-

that they would like to have a Brass Bed if they didn't take so much care. The less preme Court Bench.

JUDGE PRICE'S DEATH CAUSES A VACANCY

Governor Harmon May Be Asked To Appoint Marion Judge, Who Is in No Sense a Candidate for the Po-

Very Enthusiastic.A boom for Judge William E.
Scofield's appointment to the Ohio supreme court vacancy caused by the death of Associate Justice James L. Price has been sprung by the Marion jurist's friends in the third subdivision of the Tenth judicial district. The district is composed of Marion, Crawford and Wyandot counties, and Governor Harmon may be asked to appoint Judge Scofield, although the latter is in no sense a candidate for the place.Judge Scofield was appointed to the common pleas bench less than three years ago by Governor Harmon to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Boston G. Young. He was elected a year ago last fall without Republican opposition.It is claimed by the judge's close personal friends that Governor Harmon thinks a great deal of Judge Scofield's ability as a jurist and would be glad to consider him as a likely appointee.The only possible drawback to Judge Scofield's appointment, it is claimed, is the fact that Marion county already has one man on the supreme bench in the person of Justice William Z. Davis.

ONE WAY TO REFORM

DELAYS IN THE COURTS

Hon. James W. Halfhill, Allen county delegate to the "Con. Con." has offered a proposal which the Star advocates more than a year ago. It provides for the election of a common pleas judge in every county in the state. In counties having fewer than 40,000 people, the resident common pleas judge is to have and discharge the duties now devolving upon the probate judge. In larger counties, a probate court may be established. The legislature is authorized to provide for the election of additional judges when necessary. Under Mr. Halfhill's proposal, the resident judges shall reside in the county in which they are elected, but may hold court in any other county, upon assignment of the chief justice of the supreme court, who, in the absence of other provision made by the general assembly, shall pass upon the disqualification or disability of the common pleas judges. It is provided that the term or terms of court of these common pleas judges shall be open and co-extensive with the calendar year. This is in line with President Taft's recommendation to prevent delays in the trial and adjudication of cases. It would not involve a great additional expense and, if this plan were supplemented by provisions enlarging the final jurisdiction of the inferior courts, decreasing the number of grounds of appeal by striking out all except those which affect the substantial justice of proceedings, simplifying the procedure and requiring all causes filed to be brought to trial within a reasonable time or dismissed from the docket, we would hear less complaint of the devious practices and interminable delay in the courts—and less talk of "the recall."

LAYIN' TO BROWN AND REFLECTIONS THEREON

The reply of Chairman Laylin to the proposal of Walter F. Brown is unanswerable. Mr. Brown proposed that the state central committee order the election of delegates from the congressional districts by direct primaries and that the forty-two delegates thus selected name the six delegates-at-large. Mr. Laylin in reply called Mr. Brown's attention to the official call for the convention which is the final authority in the matter. This provides that the district delegates shall be selected in the manner prescribed by the congressional district committees and that the delegates-at-large shall be selected at a popular state convention called by the state committee. Mr. Laylin, while pointing out the fact that the scheme proposed by Mr. Brown would be a violation of the call, also speaks of the necessity for a state convention to give expression to the attitude of the party in this state upon the issues of the coming campaign and instruct the delegates from this state as to their action in the national convention upon these moot questions.

But Mr. Laylin might well have gone farther and exposed the unfairness of the Brown proposal when analyzed. There are twenty-one congressional districts in Ohio, to each of which is apportioned two delegates. For the purposes of illustration let us presume that Mr. Taft's adherents carried eleven of these districts and Colonel Roosevelt's friends ten. The Taft forces would then have a majority of one district, or two votes. According to Mr. Brown's plan, that one district would then arbitrarily name six other delegates added to the Taft forces, equivalent to the votes of three districts. Again it is conceivable that, on account of the personal popularity of one candidate over another, the result in one district might be a split. Then would ensue a deadlock, and Ohio might be deprived of six votes in the convention. It might be said that the "scheme is as fair for one as the other," but is this a gambling proposition? If it were possible, under the law, to have a state-wide primary, the winner to name all the delegates, there might be merit in the suggestion. The majority in the party would rule and the minority would be disfranchised in the convention. But in this matter under the call for the convention and the laws of Ohio there is but one course to follow.

We can not believe that there is any great danger in the holding of a state convention. What the party needs more than anything else is a chance to get together in convention, talk over differences and grievances and adjust them. If it shall be found that interest in the presidential fight obscures interest in the selection of a state ticket, the convention can postpone the naming of state candidates until the national convention is over and its work accomplished.

But let us have a convention. The greatest harm the direct primary, admirable as it is in theory, has done is the wiping out of the convention with its enthusiasm, its enlightening debates, its interchange of social amenities and its friendly reunions. We miss all these and they had a really beneficial result upon the relation of the citizenship to government. The primary, except in time of great excitement, is a cold and formal affair and, as General Mahone used to say, "has mighty little fellowship in it." Under the convention plan, the average citizen used to devote parts of at least two or three days to his franchise duties. Now he wearily and indifferently signs petitions when asked to do so, votes at the primaries if the polls are on his way to lunch, and then, if he is not too busy, he may vote on election day. The remainder of his time he is apt to spend in abusing the men his vote or negligence helped to put in office.

It is wandering afar from our original theme, but it might be said here truthfully, that the direct primary is not a good substitute for the old "town meeting" plan of government. In the town meeting there was opportunity for argument, for information and enlightenment. The primary too often but registers the preconceived and often erroneous ideas of the voter upon matters or men of whom he knows practically nothing. In earlier days, in campaign times, the county-seat lawyers, the teachers, the preachers—all who had the gift of public speaking—went upon the hustings and every township hall and schoolhouse became a forum where the issues of the hour were debated pro and con, and some measure of truth reached. Then we all became a little proud and high-headed. We would not listen to a speaker unless we could secure one of national reputation; the local speaker was without honor in his own county. We formed our own opinions from reading our paper or the inspired pamphlets and we became cynical and disposed to believe the worst of everybody in public life. And so the cross-roads forum fell into disuse.

Even the establishment of the free rural mail delivery was not an unmixed blessing for it abolished the country-side postoffice where in earlier days the problems of the nation were boldly met and solved, at least to the satisfaction of the debaters, and certainly with increased and more enlightened interest in the duties of citizenship.

There is a tremendous power in the spoken word; there is a world of illumination and conviction in debate, and it is an incitement to the study of moot questions. The growth of the Socialistic propaganda is due solely to the fact that its protagonists have gone to the street corners and talked its heresies pleasantly and loudly, while its opponents have disdained to meet these orators on their own grounds. Let us be chary about going too far in the matter of leaving all things to the untutored or uninterested individual. Information is not inspirational. General information is largely transmitted through friction—the rubbing of individual minds against each other in masses or in groups. The women have made mighty strides in gaining general information through their clubs. And what in these days of direct primaries, with no conventions, no party spirit or loyalty, have men as good as the women's clubs?

LAW, THE PROTECTION

OF POOR AND WEAK

Virginia swings into line for the recall of judicial decisions and judges. In one of the mountain counties, as told in the press despatches, a citizen had just been convicted of a felony by a jury of his peers and the judge had said "one year in the penitentiary" when the convict appealed the decision to "the people" there present. That was the initiative and referendum. That portion of the populace in sympathy with him and heading themselves, moved by the judicial action recalled the judge, prosecutor, sheriff and as many of the jurymen as remained within range. Now the governor has initiated and called for another referendum to "the people" who are out in paces with guns to recall the recall—and provide additional functions. The newspaper despatches say the murderers of these "fellows" felt that they had been wronged by the proceedings and had a right to revere themselves by force. Well, if we are to "have a government based upon the theory that all questions must be submitted to the people and decided in the heat of passion and in the absence of understanding, why is not the resort to arms natural, indeed inevitable?" In South America we have seen many instances where obstacles were recalled laws repealed, constitutions unmade, simply as factions waxed strong and waned, organized mobs which became armies, started riots which became revolutions. In all of these, some grafter, promoter, soldier of fortune, or greedy corporation achieved riches, power or toll, but in all of them the poor and weak suffered. The law, its steady enforcement, its orderly acceptance is the shield and buckler of the poor and the helpless. When human nature is remade, when all selfishness, envy and greed have been eliminated, then, and not until then, can we afford to tear down the safeguards we have erected for the protection of those who can not maintain moated castles and men-at-arms in their own defense.

COMMENTS OF BROWN UNWORTHY OF HIM

In commenting upon the meeting of Republican executive chairman at Columbus, Mr. Walter F. Brown, the brains and largely the body of the Roosevelt movement in Ohio, said that only forty-eight bona fide chairmen were present, that they had no real authority, that ten of them are allied with the movement for Roosevelt and that the ten spent most of the day at his headquarters. Mr. Brown also darkly hinted that some of the men in attendance incurred penalties for violating the law against the use of proxies in political committees.

This statement is unworthy of Mr. Brown at his best. The Columbus gathering was not a meeting of a political committee, and no law was violated. It was a gathering of party workers, representing county organizations, who were asked to meet and confer together in the interest of Mr. Taft's renomination and reelection. Of the eighty-eight chairmen invited to attend, sixty-two responded in person or through members of their committees authorized to speak for the chairmen. Of the other twenty-six, thirteen sent letters expressing regret and their adherence to the cause of Mr. Taft. The meeting was harmonious and enthusiastic. The resolutions were adopted by a rising vote—and every man arose to vote for them. If there were ten men who attended the conference under false pretenses, who voted for the resolutions while opposing them, then they are not persons for men of honor to associate with and Mr. Brown is heartily welcome to their adherence and society. But on this charge, we should desire to have proof. The Republican senator from Ohio was present in person and every Republican member of congress from Ohio—excepting Mr. Longworth, naturally—sent a telegram pledging support to Mr. Taft. From the counties whose chairmen are in the anti-Taft column, including Mr. Brown's own county of Lucas, came prominent party representatives to testify that the president was not friendless in those counties.

Perhaps it was natural for Mr. Brown to publicly discount the importance and significance of this gathering, but he will not do so privately.

Each succeeding day's proceedings of the Ohio constitutional convention demonstrates how perfect was the word picture of the Rev. Mr. Bigelow painted by the Star prior to his elevation to the presidency of that body.

And yet some of the straw votes, taken two weeks ago up in North Dakota, showed the "spontaneous demand" working overtime.

Judging by the returns from the first state primary, the condition of Senator La Follette was not so bad as diagnosed by his alleged progressive friends.

While the one per cent. tax law, no doubt, has brought to light much personality not heretofore listed, it is probable that there are still a few very excellent player pianos listed at the old standard figure—twenty-five dollars.

Instead of experimenting on plums, which are cool enough as they are, why doesn't Wizard Burbank try to make the apricot edible?

With La Follette admittedly out of the race and Cummins left at the start, the next two or three weeks should demonstrate to the most incredulous that it is a walkaway for Taft.

Colonel Henri Watterson suggests that the way to stop window smashing by the London suffragists is to hang up bargain sale cards in the shop windows, and they'll forget their suffragettes. It's evident the passing years have brought more wisdom to the colonel in the matter of handling the military of the fair sex than in picking presidential candidates.

The saddest phase of the "thing is that those Dakota primaries were held over the colonel's old stamping ground.

That indignation to the effect that the anti-Harmon people were kicking "Uncle Jud's" town around, down at Columbus, Tuesday, evidently was written by one Uncle Jud, for his steam boiler was working satisfactorily.

It began to look as though this campaign was to teach a lesson to people who are careless about where they are on their hats.

It was not necessary for Uncle Jud to go to take any steps to "hush" the "hush" after the Columbus gathering. After "Uncle Jud" finished his job of rolling, there wasn't any more.

COLONEL LOSES AT PRIMARIES

La Follette Downs Roosevelt in North Dakota.

TEDDY'S MANAGERS CONCEDE DEFEAT

Roosevelt Loses Heavily Even in Cow Country.

The Colonel's Managers Make the Charge That Democrats Cast Their Votes for Wisconsin Man. As Returns Continue To Come in It Is Plain That Roosevelt Men Feel Defeat More keenly.

Bismark, N. D., March 20.—A severe storm, which put telephone and telegraph wires out of commission, thus holding up the late returns today, prevented a full count in the presidential primaries, although the La Follette managers claimed victory by from 15,000 to 20,000 majority, while the leaders of the Roosevelt faction conceded their defeat.

The most striking feature of the returns already in was the poor showing made by Roosevelt, and experienced campaign managers from an analysis of the figures, declared that the complete returns would carry out the same ratio as the early figures. This was the first state-wide presidential primary ever held. The Roosevelt leaders charged that many Democrats had cast their votes for La Follette. With thirty-one counties to be heard from, the figures stood: La Follette, 6,953; Roosevelt, 3,981, Taft, 270.

Friends of President Taft made no effort to show any strength at yesterday's primaries.

Even in Cow Country.

Even in some portions of the cow country, La Follette ran even or better. Roosevelt carried Medora, his former home twenty to thirteen.

With Grand Forks, Valley City, Devils Lake, Minot and others of the larger cities listed for La Follette by the returns, it seemed that the Wisconsin senator's plurality would be large.

Leaders of the La Follette movement sent a telegram to Senator La Follette aboard a train on his way from North Dakota to Washington, stating that he had won the preference primaries by from 15,000 to 20,000 votes.

The La Follette men declared that they would admit no smaller margin of votes.

Frank Talcott, chairman of the state Republican committee, declared today that the fight had been made on principle and that personalities did not figure in the result in his opinion.

La Follette Pleased.

Chicago, March 20.—Senator Robert M. La Follette, in Chicago today, expressed his pleasure at the plurality of 15,000 to 20,000 he received in yesterday's presidential primary in North Dakota.

"I expected it," he said smilingly. "But I confess that the size of the plurality is a surprise. The state will not be shaken from its progressive trend. It is only to be expected that the Roosevelt forces would come forth with some explanation for their defeat. The one made by Mr. Bass is diverting as well as entertaining. So many Democrats voted for me and this prevented the people from expressing their real sentiments. Why, it is a well-known fact that in many precincts there are practically no Democrats. I suppose the Roosevelt men will have the cows voting for me, to override the will of the people."

La Follette's Majority.

Fargo, N. D., March 20.—Six hundred and fifty-nine precincts out of 1,500 in the first presidential primary gave La Follette 21,667 and Roosevelt 15,115 votes. According to this ratio, political experts today "sure that La Follette's majority over Roosevelt will reach 15,500.

Roosevelt Disappointed.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., March 20.—Colonel Roosevelt showed disappointment over the result of the primary in North Dakota and while he declared he had not expected to win there, he was brusque when asked by the newspaper correspondents at Sagamore Hill how he liked the results.

"I said two weeks ago that we did not expect to win in North Dakota," he said the colonel. "We made no campaign in the state at all."

The ex-senator refused to comment on the showing of Senator La Follette, who led Roosevelt in the primary fight.

After a feedback ride, the colonel got down to work upon the speeches he will deliver on his middle western tour next week. He will deliver four or five set speeches and go the "limb" on the question of presidential primaries.

Colonel Roosevelt will open his personal campaign tonight in New York with his speech on "The Right of the People to Rule" at Carnegie hall.

It is better to appreciate wisdom than to be appreciated by fools.

Governor Marshall Opens Indiana State Convention.

HE TAKES A RAP AT ROOSEVELT

Theories of Colonel Assailed by the Governor.

No Liberty Lover Will Ever Come To Forget Name of Lincoln and None Will Be Able To Forget Roosevelt, Declares Marshall. Governor Says Recall Is Not at All Necessary.

[BULLETIN.]

Indianapolis, March 21.—The state convention nominated Samuel Ralston, of Lebanon, for governor by acclamation.

Favors Tariff Reforms.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 21.—Declaration in favor of tariff reform, stricter enforcement of laws and government economy was made here today by Governor Marshall in opening the state Democratic convention of which he was temporary chairman.

The principles advocated were looked upon as the governor's platform in his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination. The governor also took occasion to criticize sharply some of the principles advocated by Colonel Roosevelt, chiefly the recall of the judiciary decision. He also opposed certain Socialistic doctrines, among them the initiative and referendum and recall. In part the governor spoke as follows:

"With Republican quarrels and controversies we have nothing to do. No liberty lover will ever come to forget the name of Lincoln and none will be able to forget the name of Roosevelt."

Hits at Roosevelt.

It is the theory of Roosevelt that it is the right of an unsuccessful litigant to go down to the tavern and overrule the court. Bitterness of spirit and indignation at what I deem to be judicial injustices seize me. But my sober judgment, looking to the permanent good of the people, impels me to insist that the courts must remain free and untrammelled and that we must first seek relief through the remedy we now have and patiently abide the lawful reversal of judicial injustice.

"Until the provisions of our present constitution with reference to officials are tried and until greater evils arise than have thus far arisen, there is but slight demand for the initiative and referendum and the recall."

The governor concluded with his appeal for a tariff for revenue and declared himself against special privilege of all kinds.

Washington Logger Kills Specialist in Seattle.

Akey and his assistant, Dr. Samuel Suskind, specialists, and a half hour later took his own life. The tragedy began in the offices of the physicians in the Silver building and ended in the Norman hotel with the self murder of Anderson.

THE SHUT-IN.

The life of the shut-in has its compensations. None will deny that it is hard to let the absorbing activities of all the world go by on the further side of the door, beyond the screen, while round us are hushed footfalls and soft voices. It is hard to accept with resignation the harsh discipline of pain and the remorseless tyranny of nerves when others rejoice in their well-being and do not know the meaning of physical limitations. When the warm sun shines and the balm of the earliest promise of the spring breathes at the window it is a galling imprisonment to be with a vast of medicine bottles and the land of counterpane before us yet this is the portion of many who smile and are patient and uncomplaining.

The victory of the spirit over the fainting weakness of the flesh brings a certain uncommunicable satisfaction. "Who knows but this surrendered face is undefeated still?" A book like the Little Songs from St. Joseph's, of Grace Norton's fancy, is true to the experience of many a sufferer whose soul has been the whitewashed wall of a hospital, and who has plucked flowers at the verge of Acheron and found them blooming even amid the ash pits of the inferno. The poems that have come from the heart and found the heart have been words of eternal suffering—Philadelphia Ledger.

According to a Parisian physician, premature baldness is the result of some teething trouble.

KILLING OFF OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS

What Great Good the Owl Can Be to Farmers.

A fruit grower in Wisconsin recently had the value of owls impressed upon him in such a way as he will never forget. It was a bitter experience for him and a good object lesson not only to orchardists but every one who does not recognize the usefulness and importance of their "friends in feathers."

This fruit grower had, by care and painstaking work, succeeded in bringing his apple orchard up to a point where it was capable of yielding a product valued at $8,000 a year, only to have the trees destroyed by mice and practically destroyed in one winter. Nailed up on the orchardist's barn was the carcass of an owl which he had shot and put up as a warning to other owls to keep at a distance. After his orchard was destroyed by mice he applied to the agricultural authorities of his state for a remedy. The expert sent to investigate cut open the stomach of the owl's carcass and found the remains of nine field mice, which the owl had destroyed. This orchardist by destroying owls and such like birds which prey upon mice, had made it easy for the mice to multiply and destroy his trees.—Our Dumb Destroyers.

TWENTY-FIVE MEN MAROONED ON SHIP

Vessel Is Held in the Ice in Dongs Bay.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 21.—Twenty-five men are marooned in a vessel jammed fast in the ice and believed to be sinking today in Dongs bay, Lake Michigan, twelve miles north of here. The ship has sounded distress signals since midnight. Ice-breaking tugs and a life-saving crew put out from here today in an effort to save the ship and rescue the men. Their progress is impeded by the ice that has been driven shoreward by recent heavy winds. The tugs were unable to get within speaking distance of the ship after two hours struggle.

The plight of the vessel was discovered by persons living along the shore of the bay. They telephoned the harbor officials here. The vessel was a mile from shore and the ice was piled so high around her that only her funnels could be seen. The vessel was identified as the Conestoga. She left Grand Haven, Michigan, late last night with a crew of twenty officers and men and three passengers.

The vessel is not equipped with wireless apparatus. She was blown twelve miles off her course by the storm. The vessel is the property of the Crosby line.

MRS. WILLIAM WISE DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Death Comes at Home of Parents in Martel.

Martel, March 21.—[Special.]—Mrs. William Wise, aged twenty years, died very suddenly Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Steinhilber, about two miles north of this place. The cause of death was inflammation of the bowels, resulting from a heavy cold contracted a week ago.

The deceased had been residing with her husband near New Winchester. While on a visit at the home of her parents, she was taken ill Wednesday morning, she dropped back in her bed as if fainting. Dr. O. W. Winchester, was called. On his arrival, he pronounced her dead. The deceased is survived by her husband and an infant child, her parents and one sister, Eusebia Steinhilber.

The funeral will be held from the parents' home, Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and interment will be made in Whitestone cemetery, north of Martel.

ON BEING ALONE.

A philosopher in a recent book preaches the doctrine of individuality. People ought to spread mortality alone, thinking of the world, their God and themselves. Instead of this, they are always wanting to get with somebody to talk, most likely, drivel and insignificance. A man's communion alone is the greatest event of his life. He doesn't always want to be seeing people; often he does perhaps, not always. Solitude is a sort of virtue, if not carried to excess.

To every man the problem of life is an individual one, and he must solve it by his own resolution. He should make up his mind what he should be and then go out among men and be it. He is most certain to make a good resolve, for when he is alone, there is another always to hold him. Emerson said: "Every man alone is a creature; at the entrance of a second person hypocrisy begins." We would like to see a conference made in this way: Say six men are interested in a certain proposition, but before they meet, let each one alone write out in twenty or thirty words his candid opinion of it and then when they meet, see what a perfect and practical and sensible experience.

All our good purposes and resolutions are formed when we are alone and forgotten or broken as we go with others. The illustrious Emerson's remark, above quoted.—Ohio State Journal.

Columbus, O., March 21.—The constitutional convention assembled at 10:30 o'clock. President Bigelow immediately an apology for his failure to give delegates a division upon the matter to adjourn yesterday when Del. Lampson was seeking to obtain floor to introduce his amendment inhibiting the single tax from incorporated into the constitution through the I. and R.

President Bigelow made a graceful apology, which was received in silence. He said his mistake "came at the end of a very fatiguing day and that the president wished to acknowledge that it was a mistake and to thank the members for not making a fuss about it."

Assails "I. and R."

B. F. Weybrecht, of Alliance cured the floor and read a long script assailing the initiative referendum legislation as foreign to the fundamental principles of American government as laid by such men as Thomas Jefferson and Abraham Lincoln. He also assailed the Oregon I. and R. ballot illustration of his argument.

Direct action did not work out to the interests of the majority of the people, but that a few, mostly Socialists, initiated the measures.

At the conclusion of Delegate Weybrecht's address A. Hoskins, of Laize, took the floor and advocated that a rule be made that speakers on the I. and R. be limited to five minutes. He introduced a motion that effect, but later withdrew when he found it met with disapproval among the delegates.

Against Single Tax

James W. Halfhill, of Lima, the next delegate to address the convention. He spoke against the tax and declared that were the tax eliminated from the proposition and R. he would support the measure. This statement was greeted with considerable applause.

Compared to the debating yesterday when the delegates sat restlessly expectant at all times, this morning was a drawn out and uninteresting affair. The convention recessed at 12:25 until 1 o'clock. No vote was expected today as many members still did not speak at length upon the amendments.

Another Socialist's Dilemma

The Socialist mayor of Lorain pears to be experiencing some of the same trials as came early in the year to the Socialist mayor of Lima. Unable to get the result wanted from his service director, Lorain executive has now nearly dismissed him and appointed a Republican in his place. It is expected that his act will cause a split in the Socialist party in the town, which will be bad for the party possibly bad for the town but not necessarily bad for the Socialists, like others, learn from experience in Lorain.

Look like a good plan for the city of 30,000 to refer to a committee of public policy to his leaders for determination. It is, however, it becomes necessary for the mayor to act independently to shoulder responsibility for important acts and to sink or swim on his own.

Possession of an important changes one's conceptions of life. The free and easy manner of the party "strucker" will not do a big executive office satisfactorily. A mayor who finds himself hated by partisan conditions does not to cast them off. If that is for a Socialist, dismissing Socialists from his administrative and appointing men from other party, no one need wonder what the incident may bring.

It only goes to indicate that the mayor is of majority class.

FRANK PHILLIPS GETS LONG TERM IN PRISON

Judge W. E. Scofield Gives Him Seven Years.

FELLOW IS TAKEN TO THE PENITENTIARY

Prisoner Claims He Is Innocent and Asks for Mercy of the Court. Decision Is Given in Contention as to the Will of Late William Thew—Court Notes.

Frank Phillips, convicted of burglarizing the Parisian dyehouse on south State street, was sentenced to serve seven years at hard labor in the Ohio penitentiary by Judge William E. Scofield shortly before 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. Phillips, heavily manacled, was taken to Columbus by Sheriff John G. Stark and Police Chief John F. McDonough on the twelve-o'clock interurban car. The officers had received a tip that an effort to effect the prisoner's rescue probably would be made by certain of his pals and every precaution was taken by them to prevent anything of the kind.

"I want to tell you," asserted Chief McDonough just before he started, "if anybody gets on the car and tries to start something there will be plenty of shooting." And the chief slapped his gun.

Attorney John DeGoller, Phillips' counsel, made an eloquent plea for clemency after the court had overruled his motion for a new trial on the main ground of newly-discovered evidence.

"I'm innocent of the Richland county job and I'm innocent of this," said Phillips when asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be passed. "I am innocent your honor and would like another chance to lead a better life. I ask the mercy of the court."

Phillips stood behind a chair and displayed considerable nervousness. His voice was clear and distinct, however.

Half a hundred people assembled in the court-room to hear the judge sentence Phillips, whose counsel admitted that he had served ten years from Richland county for safekeeping. It had been planned to arraign him at 9 o'clock, but the court stenographer did not arrive in the city from Upper Sandusky until 10:30 o'clock and Judge Scofield did not send for the prisoner until after that official put in an appearance in court. Phillips had also served time from Morrow county.

Judge Scofield, in passing sentence, declared that he was not disposed to give the prisoner a lecture. He thought that it was a singular coincidence that Phillips, after having been twice convicted for a similar crime, should be arrested in a room where there were all sorts of burglar tools and nitroglycerine with which to blow open safes. He said such a coincidence must appear as singular even to the defendant's counsel. He added that the prisoner had been found surrounded by all the instruments used by the hardened criminal in his war upon society.

"Society must be protected," asserted the court. He spoke at some length on the fact that the prisoner failed to take the witness stand to explain the situation if he were innocent. After mentioning that, notwithstanding that Phillips had served time for other crimes, he had not abandoned his way of living, he pronounced sentence. Phillips calmly sat down to await his removal to the jail by the sheriff and Chief McDonough. Phillips is forty-five years of age.

Suits on account to remove judgments against E. C. Gabler, of Portland, Oregon, and Martin L. Alexander and Cecil Alexander, of Detroit, were begun in the court of common pleas, Tuesday, by the Bindley Grocery company, of this city, through Attorney Hoke W. Donahue. The plaintiff asks judgment against Gabler for $606.53 with six per cent. interest from August 8, 1910, and against the Alexanders for $305.40 with six per cent. interest from August 26, 1911.

In construing the will of the late William Thew, Tuesday, immediately after passing sentence upon Frank Phillips, a burglar, Judge William E. Scofield held that the children of the parties named as legatees can not succeed to the interests of their dead parents. Only the children of the parties named in the will surviving at the expiration of thirteen years following the demise of the testator, and the descendants of the children who have died since the expiration of thirteen years are entitled to an inheritance under provision, No. 66, of the will, which distributes about $28,600 to many heirs in fifteen different states.

Judge Scofield held that the testator did not intend that the estate should vest until one year after the death of three persons named in the will as receiving annuities and not within thirteen years after his own death. Then, according to the terms of the will, the estate should be converted into money and distributed, share and share alike, among certain surviving persons, who are named in the will. Because some of these beneficiaries died before the expiration of thirteen years, the question arose as to whether their children would inherit interests in the estate.

According to Judge Scofield's decision the children of the dead legatees can not inherit their parents' interest. The court construed the will upon the application of Executors J. W. Thew, John Wesley Thew and H. W. Thew, who desired to make a distribution in accordance with the testator's directions.

In the partition suit of Mollie Butler against Martha A. Underwood, Eva Williams has elected to take 57 1/2 acres of land in Claridon township at its appraised value of $5,750 and Judge Scofield, Tuesday, ordered the remainder of the estate, about forty acres, sold.

Judge Scofield, Tuesday, affirmed the lower court in the error proceeding of George E. Stayner, who was fined $50 and costs by Mayor John G. Selter for violation of the Hosiery law. The court declared the evidence against Stayner for bootlegging was very strong.

The damage action of Mark Q. Chase against C. W. Jacoby was taken out of assignment, Tuesday, and the cause of Lill against Leffer, an action to set aside a deed, was set down in its place for Thursday, March 28.

The divorce case of Rutler against Rutler will be heard next Monday.

In the suit of the Home Building Savings & Loan company against E. E. Bush and others, Judge W. E. Scofield has overruled the demurrer to the answer and cross-petition of W. T. Owen, administrator of the estate of Henry Cope.

A transcript of the peace complaint of Isaac B. Smith against Glenn Adney has been filed in the court of common pleas. Adney was placed under a $100 bond to keep the peace a month ago, because he had threatened violence to sixteen-year-old Harry Smith, son of Isaac B. Smith.

In the old suit of Daniel Murphy against the Marion Baseball company, the plaintiff, through Attorneys Scofield & Durfee, filed a motion in the court of common pleas, Tuesday, to compel the plaintiff to elect between identical items sued for in each cause of action in his third amended petition. It is also asked that the plaintiff be made to comply with former orders of the court, and separately state and number his causes of action.

County Auditor Jay Spaulding and President G. H. Foster, of the city board of review, went to Columbus, Tuesday, to attend a meeting of the state's taxing officials called by the state tax commission.

CASPER DAUM FINED BY JUSTICE GOMPF

Is Arrested for Cruelty to Animals and Pleads Guilty.

Casper Daum, a drayman, was arraigned before Justice Charles E. Gompf on a charge of cruelty to animals, Tuesday at 9:30 o'clock. He pleaded guilty and was fined five dollars and costs, which he arranged to pay.

"Now, I tell you, Daum," said Justice Gompf, "the best thing you can do is to let the hops alone. You're a little bit tipsy now."

Daum denied the allegation and went out of the room mumbling something about not neglecting his family.

According to Humane Officer J. W. Ush, Daum starved a cow, a calf and a colt were found in a serious condition by the authorities.

Daum is married and has eight children. He lives on Church street near Forest lawn avenue.

To Retain Pastor.

A meeting of the congregation of the Salem Evangelical church was held at the church, Monday evening, for the purpose of taking action on retaining the present pastor, Rev. C. J. Keppel. Rev. Mr. Keppel received a call to St. Louis at an increase of salary, but the congregation voted unanimously to retain the pastor and his salary will probably be increased at the next meeting of the church council.

WILLIAMS TAKES RIDE ON PILOT OF ENGINE

Hauled to Hospital and Is Found Unhurt.

ALLOWED TO SOBER IN THE CITY PRISON

Fellow Objects To Being "Insected" in the Hospital and Officer Decides He Should Be Locked Up for His Own Protection—An Accident on the Erie Tracks.

Struck by a westbound Erie extra freight train at the Main street crossing and carried nearly a square on the engine pilot, William Williams, forty-two years old, a junk buyer, was rushed in an ambulance to the Marion City hospital, Monday afternoon shortly after 5 o'clock, only to be discharged from that institution as unhurt and conveyed in the same ambulance to the city prison, where, instead of occupying an undertaker's slab or a hospital cot, he was locked up for safe keeping. Even after his terrifying experience, Williams, according to Patrolman James Cusic, was still under the influence of a prize jag.

Williams had started for his home on Cottage street when the accident happened. He was driving a team attached to a light top wagon. When he came to the Big Four crossing the watchman shouted a warning and tried to stop him. Williams emitted an oath and drove on the tracks almost directly in front of the Erie train, which was running not more than eight miles an hour. The wagon was reduced to kindling wood and Williams landed on the pilot. The engineer stopped his train a little beyond the alley between Main and Prospect streets, where Williams was tenderly lifted from the pilot and placed on the ground. Dr. J. M. Hoskins, who happened to be on the scene, glancing at the man, said that he looked like he might be seriously hurt.

A hurry call was sent to the Hess & Markert ambulance and Williams was taken to the hospital on Blaine avenue. Patrolman Cusic, who was standing on the public square and witnessed the accident, accompanied him in the ambulance. At the hospital he was removed on the ambulance cot and carried up the winding stairway to the operating room.

When Williams caught sight of the several white-capped nurses standing around, he sat bolt upright on his cot. "I'm goin' home," he stammered. "You don't insect me."

Dr. A. Ith, the Erie surgeon, had not yet arrived, and Williams fought desperately. Finally he was allowed to rise and the nurses made an examination of him. He was found not only unhurt, but he did not even have a bruise.

"I think the best thing we can do is to lock this fellow up for his own protection," volunteered Patrolman Cusic, and Williams was bundled into the ambulance and taken to prison. After passing two hours in a cell Williams was sufficiently sobered to be released and was ordered home. His horses, which were uninjured, had been placed in a livery barn.

Williams is married and has a family of five children.

A corn and alfalfa special to be run over the Erie railroad by the College of Agriculture of the Ohio State university will visit Marion, April 5, at noon, and will make a stop of forty-five minutes. Lectures will be given on corn growing and alfalfa culture, the purpose of the pictures being to give farmers useful information that will avoid the loss caused by the planting of corn that will grow and the improper culture of alfalfa.

The special lecture train will run from Cleveland to Kenton April 3, 4 and 5. During the three days, twenty-five lecture stops will be made. The lectures will be given on board the train with night meetings at Akron and Mansfield. The train is operated and equipped free by the Erie and the College of Agriculture furnishes the lecturers and literature to be distributed at each stop.

Luis Jackson, industrial commissioner of the Erie, and A. B. Graham, superintendent of agricultural extension in the College of Agriculture will have charge of the train. The lecturers will be A. G. McCall, W. H. Darst, C. J. Grant and C. S. Wheeler. Directions for making the germination test of seed corn will be given. The Ohio experiment station men state that fully one-fifth of the seed corn in Ohio this year will not grow, and that one bad seed ear will cause a loss of at least three bushels of corn.

The train will reach Martel at 10 o'clock, April 5, and after remaining there forty-five minutes will leave for Caledonia. It will arrive there at 11 o'clock, and after a stay of forty-five minutes there, will leave for Marion. As stated, it will arrive here at noon. It will reach Decatur at 1:10 p. m. on the day named, the trip to be completed when the train reaches Kenton at 3 o'clock.

The train should not be confused with the Ohio Rooster car which, as was noted last week, will arrive here on a similar mission, March 28, and will be stationed here from 8 a. m. to 11:15 a. m.

Mr. Search was forty-four years of age and was sent to the hospital in 1892.

The remains were brought here for interment.

POLICE COURT.

Ernest Roeker, of north Main street, is holding the bag for eleven dollars as a result of cashing a forged check for Charles Bell, who until a week ago was employed at Long brothers' livery barn, on north Main street. Bell was employed at the barn about a month and cashed several checks at Roeker's place, on north Main street.

A week ago last Saturday, Bell asked Roeker to cash a check for eleven dollars. This was Bell's weekly salary and the amount of the checks previously cashed for him by Roeker. Regardless of this fact Roeker called the barn where Bell had been employed and was informed that Bell had been given a check for the amount mentioned. The check was given to others by Mr. Roeker and it was a week before it made the trip to the bank and was returned to Roeker. It then developed that Bell had made a duplicate from the original check and thereby was able to cash the forged check without much suspicion.

Since cashing the check, Bell has left the city and his whereabouts are unknown. Roeker filed an affidavit in the mayor's court, Monday morning, charging him with forgery.

SENATOR BURTON HOLDS RECALL UNTHINKABLE

He Addresses the Constitutional Convention Today.

DEFINES STAND ON PROPOSALS

Senator Burton today gave Initiative and Referendum Each a Trial, and Within Limits Making Them Part of Political Policy of State—Taxation Problem.

Columbus, O., March 23.—The Ohio constitutional convention, Senator Theodore Burton today outlined his attitude toward several important proposals that are holding the attention of the delegates. At the beginning of his address Mr. Burton congratulated the convention upon its action in deciding upon an amendment for the issuance of $50,000,000 in bonds for the construction of improved highways in the state. He deprecated attempts being made to obtain national aid for good roads within the borders of any commonwealth, holding that the tendency of such a policy would be to diminish local initiative and to vest increasing authority in the federal government. In view of Ohio's large proportionate share of taxation, the senator said it is not an exaggeration to say that she would pay $6, or even more, for every dollar she would receive from the federal government.

National aid, in the opinion of the senator, would point to the establishment of the principle that the federal government helps those who do not help themselves and places alert, progressive communities on the same footing with those which neglect or refuse to provide for their own needs. He thought the disproportionate burden imposed upon the people of Ohio in case this plan were adopted should be thoroughly understood. If it is advocated, he said, let every one clearly understand what is meant, namely, that he is spending $6 for every $1 that he receives and is fostering a policy which places those who have no energy on the same footing with those who meet their full responsibilities.

The Liquor Question.
Mr. Burton declared he was glad to note that the question of woman suffrage and the regulation of the liquor traffic had been left to a vote of the people each as a separate proposition. Nothing is more desired, he said, than that the mooted liquor question should be removed from politics. It is but fair that the people should have opportunity for a full and free expression on this problem, which he stated should be kept as far as possible distinct from other issues presented to the people or considered by the legislature. Senator Burton proceeded:

In this connection I wish merely to suggest to the convention the desirability of submitting the constitution to a vote of the people, separate from any other issue. You, its members, know better than I whether it is practicable to prescribe a vote at a different date from that of the coming presidential election. The issues of a general election, the decisions to be reached relating to the constitution, are both alike questions of surpassing moment, and it is desirable that without complication they may be separately considered by the people.

Taxation Problem.
The question of taxation has evoked much discussion in the state. I am especially opposed to the present rigid rule of uniformity in laying taxes. It is impossible to place intangible assets on the same footing with land and tangible property which are in the public view and readily open to inspection of the assessor. It is a question whether it is best to place any rigid limit upon the right of the legislature to classify objects of taxation.

There is a large field for obtaining contributions for public expenses by means of an excise or privilege tax on both public service and private corporations. One of the most serious defects of the present Ohio constitution is the doubtful authority it confers on the legislature to impose excise taxes. The new instrument should leave no doubt as to this power.

Inheritance taxes have been adopted in nearly all the states. While this species of tax lays a reasonable tribute on wealth it occasions less disarrangement in the prosecution of enterprise than a levy on active capital. A graded inheritance tax also tends to prevent the accumulation and transmission of what are called "swollen fortunes."

In a well adjusted system of taxation there should be some dividing line between the respective loyalties of the federal and state governments. The most natural division would seem to leave income taxes to the federal government and inheritance taxes to the state.

I should question the advisability of any constitutional limitations of the rate of taxation, however welcome it may be to the taxpayers of the state. One thing is inevitable—that with the growth of the functions of government, public undertakings will tend to increase. There will be a variety of public measures for the relief of suffering and disease, for the care of defective classes, for ameliorating the conditions of the poor and aged, and for various public improvements. All these are incident to a progressive society, in which greater regard is had for humanity and for securing a better utilization of the resources of the state. Sanitariums for consumptives and good roads are illustrations of forms of public expenditure which will surely increase in the future.

While this taxation is always regarded as a burden, it should not be an object of dread, if there is economical and efficient administration and public funds are devoted to purposes which admittedly promote the public welfare.

A rule for the imposition of the so-called double liability on stockholders of state banks is certainly worthy of your consideration. The national banking law has a rule to this effect. In this connection it may be said that the prevalent apprehension of the dangers from publicity in requiring statements from corporations and from supervision over them has been absolutely disproved by the experience of the national banks which, under severe laws and regulations, have afforded investments of capital among the most profitable in the country.

Initiative and Referendum.
I am aware that the one question before you which attracts the most earnest attention today is that of the initiative and referendum. As I interpret the vote of the people last autumn, it was in favor of the adoption of these two methods of legislation, and, when properly safeguarded, I not only do not oppose but favor giving each a trial and within limits, making them a part of the political policy of the state. At the same time I must say, with emphasis, that these new methods for expressing popular will should neither be regarded with grave apprehension nor be depended upon for a regeneration of the body politic.

All political conditions are shaped by the ideals of the people. These ideals result from a multitude of causes, from traditions, religious beliefs, political opinions and environment. Physical conditions must also be taken into account. This is especially true in our own country. No one is satisfied with that which he has. There is no rigidity or crystallization in our society. The poor of one generation may become the millionaires of the next. There is a constant struggle for advancement in which the weaker are often forced to the wall. Unrelenting, pitiless competition is visible on every side.

We are prone to overrate the effect of the enfranchisement of new classes of voters or of laws which seek to give to the people a larger participation in the government. With the advancement of science and the greater diffusion of intelligence, the influence of the individual is constantly made broader, and this influence is reflected in all the functions of government. If the industrial and commercial classes make more effective use of the ballot and assert a larger political influence than formerly, it is because, in more fundamental ways, they are playing an increasingly prominent part in the nation.

In every country, no matter where the law-making power may be vested, there will be certain forces which will take the form of despotism. In this country that despotism is public opinion. Whenever reforms are adopted or great changes made, they are in an important sense the expression of the best thought of the whole people, and that thought will find expression, no matter to what methods it may be limited.

For and Against I. & R.
It is my desire to state at some length the arguments for and against the initiative and referendum.

1. They provide a means for obtaining an expression from all the citizens of the body politic.

2. Corruption, favoritism, boss domination and consideration of partisan advantage would naturally be less effective with the mass of the people than with a limited number of legislators.

3. They provide a new method for a test of public judgment upon any question which is of interest to a considerable number of citizens. Such a test is often denied in a legislative body.

4. Measures of a most salutary nature are oftentimes defeated by the strenuous opposition of an active minority of citizens, whose condemnation legislators fear to incur. On the other hand, an aggressive and interested group may secure legislation which is not conducive to the general welfare.

5. In an ideal commonwealth, the principle of initiative or referendum would tend to divert the minds of the voters from abject interest in party success and the election of favorite candidates to questions of principle.

6. Special emphasis should be laid on the fact that the adoption of the initiative and referendum would be a most powerful influence to stimulate the interest of the people in public affairs and to a sense of their responsibilities as American citizens. To say that it is unsafe to leave important legislative propositions to the people is to confess the existence of a condition which should be remedied. We must always bear in mind that we are under a popular government and that ultimately the people must rule.

1. The general apathy in the performance of political duties makes it difficult to awaken sufficient interest in the mind of the average voter to enable him to reach correct conclusions upon public questions.

2. Question of competency of the average voter. It has been customary to refer to the American voter as a man endowed with extraordinary capacity. Such qualifications are rare in a country where unlimited opportunities for material advancement and professional success are so exceptionally inviting as in the United States. The general body of the electorate may be competent to decide great fundamental questions, but the serious difficulty in the way of a wise determination is inattention to public affairs and the predominant interest in subjects other than political.

3. There is danger that under the initiative and referendum there will be a tendency to form groups dominated by a selfish desire to promote the advancement of their own particular interests.

4. Legislation of the most helpful and enduring character is always the result of ample discussion and a careful comparison of views. The opportunity for consultation and mature judgment is lacking in case propositions are voted upon in the form in which they are first presented.

5. Deny it as we may, a great multitude of voters are often swayed by passion or influenced by superficial judgments or demagogical appeals. It is the exception rather than the rule that the first judgment of the voters, even upon questions of the utmost importance, has been accepted as final.

6. The adoption of direct legislation would diminish the prestige and usefulness of legislative bodies and lower the quality of their membership. The members would become accustomed to evading responsibility in the face of popular agitation and would refer to a popular vote questions which they themselves should decide.

Contrary to Original Plan.
It may be conceded that the adoption of direct legislation is contrary to the original plan upon which both the national and state constitutions were based. The essential ideas in that plan were:

1. That it is impracticable to govern by a direct democracy in any country having a large population or extended territory. 2. That the best substitute for direct participation is to give the law-making power to representative bodies.

A further reason for this plan was the opinion that men in public affairs who perform their duties under the sanction of an oath and who must be responsible to their constituents for their conduct, will presumably feel a deeper sense of responsibility than those who make up the general electorate.

Through all discussions relating to the adoption of the federal constitution may be noticed two coordinate ideas—first, that the will of the people should prevail, and second, and equally important, that it should be deliberately expressed. The framers of the constitution believed that wisdom in legislation is not always the result of first impressions or temporary impulses. It has been said that they were alike afraid of the despot and the mob.

If the initiative and referendum are to be adopted, and, as already stated, the voice of the people in the state of Ohio last autumn seems to be conclusive of a desire to that effect, certain safeguards should be insisted upon.

Favors Safeguards.

1. The plan adopted by the Swiss confederation should be followed, under which propositions for initiative are first submitted to the legislative body for acceptance or rejection, as well as for revision and the presentation of an alternative proposition before they are submitted to the electorate. This plan will insure adequate discussion of the proposition in question. It will also be possible to present alternative propositions similar in nature for the consideration of the people.

2. It should also be within the power of the legislature to govern the method of signing petitions and to prevent corrupt practices in relation thereto. If the percentage required is small, an active element could obtain the necessary signatures of many persons who are proverbially reluctant to refuse to sign petitions whatever their character may be. It might be well to require that petitions be left at some public office where they may be signed only in the presence of qualified officials. It is of equal importance that petitions should be signed not merely in large cities or one portion of the state, but that the petitioners should be distributed throughout a reasonable proportion of all the political subdivisions of the state. This does not mean that a single county should be able to prevent the submission of a question, but it does mean that there should not be the possibility of contests between city and county, or the necessity of asking an election with all its burdens on the initiative of petitioners in a limited portion of the commonwealth.

Should a certain percentage of the electorate be required for the adoption of any proposition? On this subject it must be said that there are manifest objections to a rule which gives the power of negation to those voters who are indifferent or inattentive. The functions of government must be performed, and those who discharge the high responsibilities of the franchise ought not to be defeated by those who ignore it.

In the practical working of the initiative and referendum, I regard it as more important that there be a limit on the number of propositions submitted at one time. It is desirable that a considerable degree of discretion be left to the legislature. It is manifest that the popular expression will be more accurate and valuable when the issues to be passed upon are clean cut and free from complication.

It goes without saying that material distinction should be made between more statutory provisions and those which pertain to constitutions and basic law. In no other way can the rights of minorities be protected and that stability be secured which is an essential part of the civic life and industrial and commercial prosperity of every community.

The Recall Problem.
I regard it as hardly worth while to take your time in opposing arguments for the recall of judges or judicial decisions. To my mind both of these alike are unthinkable. The function of judges is not to pass laws; it is to interpret them, to maintain justice and right between man and man. One important part of their duty is to stand firmly against the oppression of majorities and the power of selfish interests. It is of the utmost importance that judges should, as far as possible, be removed from the turmoil and strife of political contests and from the demands which are based upon excitement or clamor. A defeated litigant is seldom philosophical. Oftentimes decisions must be rendered which offend numerous citizens, and that judge, who by reason of the fear of an abrupt removal must constantly stand in awe of discontent or excitement, cannot properly perform his duty.

I must say that the natural sequence of the recall of judges would be the recall of judicial decisions. If you remove a judge for his conduct of a murder trial, why not hold a popular vote to determine whether the criminal should be hanged or freed? Why not subject the question of pardoning convicts to a popular vote?

The judiciary is the distinctively characteristic feature of our political system, and we cannot allow its dignity or stability to be menaced without causing the whole fabric of our government to totter. I do not say this because of any exaggerated reverence for judges. Sometimes their decisions have been biased, sometimes incorrect, and on more occasions tainted by corruption, but adequate remedies can be provided to correct their decisions or to remove the judge from office. There have, no doubt, been some instances of late where a removal would have had a salutary effect. We cannot condemn the mock-trials when they sustain their attacks upon judges by specific facts, but we must condemn them when they indulge in generalities and visit unfounded criticism upon the bench, or any other branch of our official life.

The Legislator.

I should be untrue to my association of more than 20 years if I did not say a few words in defense of that much abused citizen, the legislator. Some of the most radical advocates of the initiative and referendum base their arguments upon the most absurd contention that there are no honest men to be found who can be trusted to make laws, or, if there are such men the people are incompetent to find them. If this is true, can you trust the whole body of the electorate? Others advocate an equally absurd opinion that a citizen may be very honest as such, but when he is elected to represent his county or his district in legislative bodies, he becomes subject to such influence as to warp his judgment and render him untrustworthy.

The legislator, my friends, is a mirror of the people. He is just that, quality of man which the people desire. If they wish him to be as sturdy as an oak and to go down in defeat rather than to swerve one iota from principle, that is the kind of a man you will have in the legislatures of the state or nation. If you wish him to be subservient to every changing current of excitement or clamor, to be constantly seeking to maintain his place by devious means or otherwise, that is the kind of a man you will have.

The demand of powerful elements in society, antagonistic one against the other, that every man at Columbus or Washington, shall conform to their wishes, tends to make of these chosen representatives pastmaster in petty politics, evasive and devoid of independence or courage. It is not so much in the office of the legislator itself, but in the selfish insistence of these numerous and oftentimes noisy elements that the danger lies.

I say this with due allowance for recent disclosures of corruption in state legislatures and elsewhere. But these disclosures expose weaknesses of legislators which are exceptional and not the rule. Let the people support their lawmakers to aid in the framing of great statutes for public welfare and progress, and the standard will be raised.

The legislator will get along very well if you do not keep him dodging brickbats all the while. In line with what I said in the beginning, no method of enacting laws will bring us to the gates of the millennium or better conditions unless it be supported by a sane, patriotic and wholesome public opinion. What is needed most of all is that the great body of the people should study the problems of statecraft and give attention to the management of public affairs.

SOLE SURVIVOR'S TALE OF RUNNING BATTLE

Escaped Convict Is Again Behind the Prison Bars.

Omaha, Neb. March 19.—Charles Morely, sole survivor of the convict band which slew the warden of the Nebraska penitentiary, was back within the walls today, and told his story of the running battle in which his two companions and a hostage were slain. Sheriff Myers, who led the posse in the final battle, was at the home of friends here, guarded by state militia from friends of the slain innocent man, who were bent on lynching.

The innocent man slain was Roy Blunt, a bridegroom, living on a farm near Gretna.

"We ate and talked with the Blunt boys, Roy and Lloyd, and made them give us a team. We knew the posse was then only about an hour behind us, so we took Roy Blunt as a hostage and left a note for the posse telling them of this. From then we kept out of sight of the posse," said Morely.

"About fourteen miles north of the tracks, the leading buggy of the sheriff's posse, which was strung out back of us for two miles, came within shooting distance. We fired first, but they promptly returned the fire, and the boy, Blunt and Taylor, were killed early in the fight."

Richwood People Pass a Very Pleasant Evening.

THE SHIPLEY HOME SCENE OF GATHERING

Mrs. J. B. McAllister Entertains a Company of Young Women—The Announcement of an Approaching Marriage—Notes Gathered at Richwood During the Past Week.

Richwood, O., March 18.—[Special.]—The members of the Young Married People's Embroidery club were delightfully entertained, Thursday evening, by their husbands, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Shipley, of north Clinton street. The affair, which was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the club, was planned entirely by the gentlemen and was a success to the minutest detail. The Shipley home, which is ideally arranged for such an affair, was prettily decorated with cut flowers and was brilliantly illuminated throughout. The pretty evening gowns of the ladies added much to the beauty of the scene. Immediately after the arrival of all of the guests, they were invited to the dining-room. The decorations here were very beautiful, the long table being illuminated with softly-shaded green lights. The flowers were red and green carnations and shamrocks were scattered over the snowy cloth. The plate favors were small green silk flags and pretty bon bon boxes. The boxes for the ladies bore on their tops small shamrocks and those for the gentlemen had small clay pipes. An elaborate five-course dinner was served by Messrs. J. A. Shipley, R. R. Gill, J. P. Brooks and A. R. Kipstine. During the serving of the courses Ackerman's orchestra rendered a number of popular selections. Following the dinner a delightful program was rendered, the company remaining seated at the table. Mr. J. F. Rapp acted as toastmaster, almost every guest being called upon for a few remarks. The welcome address was given by Mr. A. B. Simons, Mrs. J. B. McAllister giving the response. The affair proved most delightful throughout.

After the guests had been seated at the dinner table, which was beautiful with its centerpiece of jonquils and with a red rose at each corner, Miss Helen McAllister and Miss Josephine Howser, representing mail carriers, delivered to each guest a note. The notes were found to contain the announcement of Miss Leah McAllister's engagement to Mr. Fred Gillman, of Calgary, Canada, the wedding to take place May 1. The interesting news was discussed by the guests, after which a five-course dinner was served, the color theme of red and yellow being observed in the courses.

NOW THREE NATIONAL CAPITALS IN MEXICO

General Zapata Makes Over- vaca the Capital.

Rebel General Has 4,700 Men Support His Republic, but Is Fearing Inducements to Rejoin Federal Army Is Advancing.

Mexico City, March 19.—General Emilio Zapata, leader of the insurrectos in the central and southern states, has proclaimed himself provisional president of Mexico. Cuernavaca is his capital. There are now three national capitals in Mexico, the other being at Chihuahua.

Zapata has 4,700 men to support his new republic, but is offering inducements to recruits. A federal army is being moved toward Cuernavaca with a view to giving battle to the Zapatist force.

There are still forty American women here, who can't leave of to a lack of funds. Many of them have come into the city from interior. The foreign legions still growing. There are now 100 Americans under arrest and 100 Germans.

THE COLONEL'S BLUFF.

Roosevelt has this time kept word and issued his challenge letter to his campaign manager.

He makes a demand for the primary, especially the larger states, urging claim that without such primaries he will not be given a so-called deal in the selection of delegates to the Chicago convention. The menace is that of a demagogue, while it lacks the dangerous turns of his Columbus attack on American Constitution, it seeks change at once and on his side the political methods that have prevailed in the greater part of country. Again does Roosevelt the honored name of Lincoln to stir up his lost cause and against the resort to the veriest balder in an endeavor to make the people believe that they do not rule in country. It is simply another on the part of Roosevelt to go force the people his new gospel, the republic will be wrecked if the helm of the ship of state is placed in his hands.

All his charges against the management and methods of the Taft campaign are most arrant unbecomings. No one knows this better than Roosevelt himself. It angered him when Chairman McKinley notified him Dixon that he did not wish to change the rules which game was in progress, but McKinley was right. Take the case of land for example. Its legislation now worrying over a presidential bill, gotten up by Democrats who hope in this way to put state in line for Wilson, though know that Maryland Democratic sentiment runs strongly against ex-president of Princeton. The bill will probably fail, but should it Maryland will go through an primary election farce at which ten per cent. of the vote of the state and will be cast. As far as Republican party in Maryland is concerned in a presidential p Roosevelt would be beaten standstill.

Only a very few of the states a presidential primary law, but they have no legislatures in session and such primaries as Roosevelt wants would have to be conducted without any standing in law and by agreement of party organizations. Such primaries would be ridiculous and would be no expression of the people's will. In fact, this is Roosevelt bluff and a mighty one at that. It is a bluff before it was made. Roosevelt in this way of keeping his followers in the limelight, seeking to his personal ambition by denouncing all but his corporal's guard of lower enemies of the country. His methods only add to the state of President Taft and make sure his renomination in November next June.—Baltimore American.

WOULD PERPETUATE PRESENT TAX LAW

State Taxers Want It in the New Constitution.

Columbus, O., March 21.—After kicking the poor old personal property assessor about for two days until he was a mass of bruises and there wasn't an unbroken bone left in his body, the convention, consisting of county auditors and members of boards of review, called at the instance of the tax commission, summarily laid on the table a resolution looking to the abolition of the present system of electing such assessors.

On motion of Frank A. Sarstedt of Cleveland, it was unanimously declared to be the sense of the meeting that the limitations of the Smith 1 per cent law should be incorporated in the constitution, and recommended that the constitutional convention, now in session, submit an amendment to that effect. It was stated that there was a fear on the part of large property owners, particularly owners of intangible personal property, that some subsequent legislation would repeal the present tax limit laws and that the old rates of taxation, running from 1 1/2 to 3 1/2 per cent, would again be levied on property, which is now assessed at full value, and that for this reason the owners of that class of property hesitated to make full returns; while if such a provision was incorporated in the constitution it was believed that substantially all taxable property could be listed with little trouble.

INSPECTORS HOLD POSTAL ROBBER

The Authorities Declare Arrested Man a Clever Thief.

St. Louis, March 21.—Postal inspectors today arrested a man named Daniel Callahan charged with the robbery of a postal sub-station in East St. Louis. The authorities declared Callahan had figured in other postoffice robberies and is wanted also for three diamond thefts aggregating $100,000.

Callahan is alleged to be the leader of the gang which stole $100,000 worth of diamonds from the safe of Mrs. Malvina Drummond on the steamer, Amerika, in February, 1911, according to Inspector Bunsen.

Bunsen also charges a murder to the gang, saying they killed a man in making their getaway after stealing $10,000 in jewels from the store of Edward Alberts in Chicago in April, 1911. In this robbery, two men were first bound and gagged.

THE LOCAL OFFICIALS RETURN FROM MEETING

Better Assessment of Personal Property Wanted.

ASSESSORS WILL GET IRON-CLAD ORDERS

With a Better Understanding of the Smith Law It Is Hoped To Get More Personal Property on the Tax Duplicate—What the Auditor Thinks of Situation.

County Auditor J. Spaulding and Members G. H. Foster and L. B. McNeal, of the city board of review, who attended a convention of about 200 taxing officials in Columbus, returned home, Wednesday. Thursday, it was announced, a strenuous effort will be made to secure a fuller and more equitable assessment of personal property in this county.

Personal property assessors are to begin their work the second Monday in May, and it is the purpose of County Auditor Spaulding, now that the low-rate law is better understood and is regarded as a fixture by the state tax commission, to use every possible influence with the personal property assessors to get more of this class of property on the county duplicate.

To this end Auditor Spaulding will issue iron-clad instructions to the assessors. He will also endeavor to have published, in pamphlet form for distribution, the name of every person in the county returning personal property for taxation and the amount returned by each.

In all probability the assessors, who will have thirty-six days in which to complete their work this year, will be informed that if they do not do their work properly their pay will be withheld.

The publication in book form of the names of taxpayers, and the amount of personal property returned by them, is regarded as a very good feature by the state tax commission in obtaining a fuller return of personally. Although there is no law authorizing the expenditure for this, several counties have done it by main strength. Auditor Spaulding is not sure whether he can do it in this county, but he would like to do so, and members of the state tax commission have said that they will lend every aid to him and other county auditors to make the desired publication, even if the law does not now authorize it.

"Every taxing official agreed that publicity was the greatest means at hand for getting a better return of personal property," said Auditor Spaulding, "and it was unanimously agreed that there should be nothing kept from the public. 'No secrets in the auditor's office.' That's

THOMAS HATCH CALLS ON THE LOCAL POLICE

Says He Is Robbed of the Sum of Nineteen Dollars.

THINKS A STRANGER SECURES THE MONEY

Charles Collins Is Arrested on a Charge of Stealing Hay and Corn. Man Is Four and the Court Delays Prosecution for an Investigation—Police Court Notes.

Thomas Hatch, a veteran of the civil war, who resides on Ola street, reported to the police Thursday afternoon, that he had been robbed of his pocketbook, which contained $19. Hatch called at police headquarters to tell the circumstances of how he was robbed.

The man stated that he came down from Sandusky, that morning, having been at the Soldiers & Sailors' home there since last December. On the train he met a fellow who asked him for a dime and Hatch accommodated him. After landing in Marion, the stranger carried a grip which belonged to Hatch and they visited a couple of places uptown before Hatch started home. He entered the house and, after placing the money in a machine drawer, stepped out the back door. When he returned his wife informed him that the stranger, who had followed Hatch into the house, had stolen the money and skipped out. He gave Chief McDonough a slight description of the stranger, but it was not sufficient to give the police a clue.

Charles Collins, of Bartram avenue, who is the father of a large family, including a five-days-old girl was arrested at his home by Officer Cusick at noon Thursday. Collins was arrested on a charge of stealing several hundred pounds of hay from the Ohio & Western Lime company, the affidavit for the warrant being sworn to by Peter Holtz, foreman of the farm.

When Holtz went to work Thursday, he discovered that during the night a haystack had been visited and a large amount of hay taken. He followed the tracks of the wagon and located the vehicle at a barn rented by Collins and located just off State street near Harrison street. He made his report to Chief McDonough, and when the latter visited the wagon with Officer Cusick they found it filled with hay and four sacks of unhusked corn. After being arrested Collins acknowledged stealing the hay, but said he needed it for his horse and had no money to buy feed. Relative to the corn, he said he knew nothing.

Owing to the circumstances of the case, it was decided to confer with the officials of the company before the man was asked to plead as to the charge against him. Collins has been employed by the company from which he stole the hay. According to the officials of the company and the foreman, several hundred bushels of corn have been stolen from shocks this winter, and also a large amount of hay, but Collins is not believed to be the only one guilty of the stealing.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW NOW IN FULL SWING

About Twenty Cars Are Placed on Exhibition.

ROYAL SKATING RINK SCENE OF THE SHOW

Formal Opening Was Held Thursday Evening—Number of Local Agents Have Cars Entered. Names of the Agents Who Are Exhibiting Their Cars.

Marion's first automobile show is now in full swing. It was opened with an exhibit of about twenty cars of various makes under the direction of Thomas J. Lucas in the Jackson garage, formerly the Royal skating rink, on north State street, Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The formal opening, however, took place Thursday evening, when amidst a blaze of electric lights, Mayor Claude D. Walters said a few appropriate words and took a motor siren. This was a signal to the Marion band, stationed in a balcony, to strike up an air calculated to recall the days of roller skating in the old rink.

Although there are not as many exhibitors as had been anticipated, Manager Lucas appears well pleased, and declares the show will be a big success, if he only has fair weather. His only disappointment so far, he says, has been the brand of the weather being dished out with the advent of spring.

With a few exceptions the exhibits are made by local agents. The show will close this Saturday night. It was open every day from 2 to 6 p. m.

The names of the exhibitors and the cars displayed are:

The common pleas court decreed that the land described in the petition should be sold "in order to pay certain legacies named in the will of the late Mary Bonner. President Urges Safeguards in Reforms.

Taft Declares That Informal or "Soap Box" Primaries Are Worse Than None at All—Is Not Unmindful of Necessity for Judicial Reform, but It Depends on Changing Procedure, Not the Judge.

Boston, March 18.—Following close upon the trail of Theodore Roosevelt, President Taft invaded New England today. He arrived in Boston at 7:15 a. m. He will go to New Hampshire tomorrow.

The president was greeted by fully 3,000 people upon his arrival at the South station. The train was five minutes late, but the big crowd did not seem to mind the delay. The crowd consisted principally of workmen and commuters, who came on the early morning trains in the big train shed, a workman shouted "Three cheers for our next president." This brought a broad smile to the president's face, and there were three cheers given with a will. The president was met at the station by a reception committee of Evacuation day and then entered an automobile with the committee.

"That's a good Irish cheer," remarked the president, as a big shout went up as his auto sped away from South station towards the City club where he took breakfast before beginning his strenuous day's tasks.

Honors St. Patrick.

The president wore a dark green necktie in honor of St. Patrick, had another breakfast at Hotel Somerset with 200 city officials and citizens. At the City club breakfast, a stalwart-looking young man stepped up to the president and gently tapped him on the shoulder. The president looked around, got up and exclaimed, "Why, hello, Bob."

"Hello, Dad," replied the young man.

Then the president kissed the fine-looking youngster. He was the president's son, Robert, who is studying law at Harvard. The incident made a big hit with the crowd. Mayor Fitzgerald leaped to his feet and cried:

"Let us give three cheers for President Taft's son."

All the diners got up and cheered. At both banquets, the president in his responses said he had no prepared speeches to deliver and merely thanked his hosts for their cordial greetings.

Taft's Boston Speech.

Boston, March 18.—President Taft kicked Theodore Roosevelt's pet judicial reform all around the ring in a speech today before the legislature of Massachusetts. He characterized recent attacks on the judiciary as "an attempt to destroy its independence and to take away from the arch of government its keystone."

The president declared that he was not unmindful of the necessity for judicial reforms, but that depends not upon changing the character of the judges, but upon a change of procedure.

Taft congratulated Massachusetts on its corporation laws, which he said have been made necessary because the rapid expansion of the country has made the people less cautious than they should have been in granting statutory provisions and to the loose provision of the legislature in corporate legislation. The president declared that congress may legislate for all interested interest reforms, but the main work incurring the progress of interests of only state wide character must rest with the states themselves.

Must See Safeguards.

"I am glad you have done this," said Mr. Taft, in speaking of the new primary law of Massachusetts, "but I think every one will admit that these primary laws to be effective should be safeguarded by effective provision as to the eligibility of the voters who participate in them, and by penal provisions securing conformity to rules of such eligibility and the honest casting and counting of the ballot."

The president declared that informal or "soap box" primaries are worse than none at all and continued:

It is eminently appropriate that in every election and discussion of all issues that affect the republic, we should hear much of the popular will and the right of the people.

As to Government.

This is a government based on popular control. We believe that as the government is constituted, its popular character is essential to its endurance and its service of the highest interest of all the people, but it is impossible for all the people to take direct part in all governmental functions.

The government is not founded upon the proposition that the people in one expression or by one vote can not make mistakes. On the contrary, there is evidence in the constitution and in its checks and balances that the people of that day as well as the people of this, recognized the fact that they should be under self-imposed restraints to prevent that possibility. The constitutional effect of momentary and impulsive action. On the other hand, however, the people of our government is the will of the people ascertained and called after full opportunity for knowledge and deliberation.

The president is also that although "rough country" and "subterranean methods" have sometimes circumvented the will of the people, that any statement that the people have not called for more direct participation in the government of the United States and he declared:

Justice for All.

"I am in favor of maintaining our self-restraint and of doing justice to ourselves and our people in what we have to accomplish."

Taft said the attack upon the judiciary and the proposal by the people for recall is to destroy the independence and thus to take away from the arch of government its keystone.

"I deny that there is any decision of the courts or the character of the judges or the result of a judicial innovation that when justified such a judicial innovation. I am not unmindful of the necessity for judicial reform, but that depends not on changing the character of the judges, but upon the change in procedure, the expedition of judgments and the reduction of the expenses of litigation. These things must be the result of hard detailed work by men willing to accomplish reforms without spectacular reward."

Lauds the Judges.

"The great body of our judges are learned, upright, patriotic men. It is entirely possible to provide for the removal of those who are not by proper procedure before a tribunal in which the accused judge shall have a hearing."

"One can easily discover a tendency in modern politics to exalt above the written law and above the written constitution what is called the popular will, as if that were a higher law to which we must all admit allegiance by obeying it and ignore or transgress statutory and constitutional limitation. This heresy is not stated exactly in the form of an assertion that judges and others are to ignore statutes and constitutions because of a conflict of popular will, but it is in the more insidious proposition that plain construction of the statute or of the constitution is to be defeated, and a strained and otherwise impossible construction put upon the language of the statute or constitution in defiance to what is supposed to be the people's will."

No specific Rule.

There is no rule for ascertaining what the popular will is, except the observation and imagination of the person who is appealing to it."

The president cited the opinion of a western judge and quoted him as saying "whatever is right is constitutional."

"Abraham Lincoln said, 'The life of this nation is greater than any constitution.' It is impossible to escape the meaning of such a view and that is that the plain construction of the constitution is to be perverted because it is thought the people at present would prefer not to be subject to the limitation contained in the constitution laws usually."

Don't Apply Here.

"The quoted words of Lincoln have here no application. It is not true that whatever is right is constitutional unless the declaration of the right is contained in the constitution or is not forbidden by it. The popular will, to be effective and to control courts, must be embodied in statutory enactment or constitutional law."

"Irresponsible assaults upon either the language or on the basic assumptions of corruption or bias, or incompetency made by those whose statements have influence with any part of our people, are a serious menace to enduring government."

BOILS BODIES OF HER WEE BABY VICTIMS

Appalling Discoveries Made by Police of Barcelona.

Woman, Dealer in the Black Art, Murders Little Children and Sells Their Bodies as Love Philly to Stranded Husbands and Wives.

Barcelona, Spain, March 19.—Appalling discoveries were made today by the police, who are investigating the career of Enrique-ta Marin, a dealer in the black art, and child murderers of children, and it was stated by the authorities that the list of victims may go to a score. The woman boiled the bodies of her little victims and sold the broth as a love philter which she guaranteed to renew the love affections of husbands and wives. One little and named Angelina, who escaped from the clutches of the Martin woman, told the police that before being killed the victims had to eat the flesh of children who had been previously slain. Part of the story is too gruesome for publication.

Since the case has become public many reports of lost children are pouring in upon the police. The sorceress is not alarmed by her plight, for she claims to have the power to leave prison at will.

Released from Jail.

William Zimmerman, who was arrested in Cleveland by Constable James F. Ullom, for defrauding Rev. J. H. Keeran out of a $47,000 bond, was released from the county jail, Saturday evening. His aged mother came up from Rushsylvania, and settled the case for him.

HITS TRAIL OF MR. ROOSEVELT

President Taft Invades the Enemy's Country.

IS WELL RECEIVED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

Crowds Greet Him All Along the Way.

A Strong Stand Against Recall of Judicial Decisions as Whim of People Is Keenest of President's Speech at Nashua—Taft Is Delighted with Reception in Boston and Other Places.

Nashua, N. H., March 18.—President Taft, who is "leading" his tour upon his arrival here today, a salute of twenty-one guns was fired by a battery of the New Hampshire National guard, and 10,000 children sang the national anthem in greeting to the nation's chief executive.

Taft made the chief speech of the day before 10,000 persons in Manchester hall, defining progress principles, and was wildly cheered by the entire audience.

"I was here four years ago just before a strenuous campaign, but the sun is shining far brighter today than it was then," said the president.

For the first time in his political speeches, he mentioned the name of Theodore Roosevelt. This brought mingled laughter and cheers. In referring to Roosevelt, President Taft said:

Colonel Taft said:

"After we abolished slavery, our country began upon a nervous strain—a strain of getting money. We gave away privileges that were too wide and too valuable franchises."

"By and by it came time to make a change. The people demanded it. I will say that under the mission of Theodore Roosevelt this change was begun."

"The progressive simply plumed himself as a progressive and accomplished little or nothing. When I was a boy there was a saying: 'Handsome is who handsome does.' If I had my way I would transpose this so that it would read: 'Progressive is as progressive does.'"

Puts It Up to People.

"Now just look at the records of the administration of which I have had the honor of being the head. If you don't think it has been a progressive administration and progressive in accomplishment condemn it."

"If you believe it has been progressive approve it."

The president then proceeded to outline what had been accomplished in the shape of legislation during his administration.

"When I took office the nation had a deficit of $70,000,000. It now has a surplus of $10,000,000. We have passed the corporation tax, the maximum and minimum wage bill, the employers' liability bill, the workmen's compensation act, opened trade with the Philippines and have given the people a square deal against the blowing of trumpets. Let that progressive I leave it to your judgment."

Taft in Time Trium.

Boston, March 19.—President Taft rose at 6:15 today, took one look out of the window of his apartments at the Hotel Somerset, and with the famous Taft smile, exclaimed:

"Glorious morning, glorious morning."

Then the president again took up the trail of Colonel Roosevelt and started for New Hampshire, pausing only for some hot and eggs. The president is delighted with his Boston reception. The cheers of the legislators and the enthusiastic last night convinced him that the Massachusetts Republicans are with the Republican administration.

The president and his party drove in autos to the North station, where they left on a special train for Nashua. During the day the president will make a series of red-hot speeches right among the progressive people of the Granite State.

President's Opinion.

The president believes that he could move the voters of New Hampshire to take a stand and speak their views, would be with him. It is the hitting the trail of Colonel Roosevelt under the auspices of the Fair League of New Hampshire. After speeches in Nashua, Concord and Manchester the president will return to Boston tonight, where he will attend the banquet of the state railway men at the State house and leave for Detroit tomorrow.

The train will be held up by the president's boat at the Rock Bay station.

In New Hampshire.

Nashua, N. H., March 19.—President Taft after a strenuous day and night in Boston was whisked into New Hampshire today—right into the heart of the enemy's country. A large throng of travel agents and a Maine railroad train were waiting at the station. The president swung into Nashua at 9:50. The president was escorted to the spot where there will be in the near future the new Y. M. C. A. building. He placed the corner-stone in a brief ceremony. Then he went to the Colonial theater, where he spoke briefly. A strong stand against the recall of judicial decisions at the whim of the people was the keynote of the president's speech.

The president left by special train for Manchester. Although not on the schedule, the Taft train stopped at Lowell, Massachusetts, and the president appeared on the rear platform and made a brief speech. James E. O'Donnell climbed on the platform and shook the president's hand. O'Donnell is a Democrat.

Twenty-Eight Dead in San Antonio Catastrophe.

Score of Victims Are Identified.

Big Damage Suits Are Likely To Follow.

Experts Are Hurried to Texas City by Southern Pacific Officials To Make Scientific Investigation—Officials Hold Explosives Cause the Disaster, While Union Shop Men Hold Adverse Opinions.

San Antonio, Tex., March 19.—After a thorough investigation the police declared their belief today that the locomotive explosion in the Southern Pacific yards yesterday which cost the lives of at least twenty-eight men had been due to carelessness. The detectives investigating the disaster had been unable to find any evidence tending to support the rumor that a fatal explosion was the result of a union labor dynamite outrage.

Mortuary work went on all night, and today it was said that the death list might go over twenty-eight, so badly were bodies torn and so difficult has it proved to ascertain how many workmen are missing.

Only a score of the victims had been identified today. The task of identification was made doubly hard because practically all the dead were strangers, having come here recently to take the places of striking shopmen. Of the fifty persons injured, five are said to be in serious condition.

While the damage from the explosion is estimated by the railroad company at approximately $200,000, it is believed that the aggregate sums asked in suits will exceed this amount. Experts have been sent here by the Southern Pacific to make a scientific investigation of the accident.

Despite the police belief to the contrary, officials of the Southern Pacific clung to the theory that an explosive had caused the disaster. Officials of the shop men's union have tendered their services in the investigation, declaring that they want to clear the name of their organization from any stigma that may rise from the case. A telegram was sent to Detective W. J. Burns, who worked the McNamara case, to come to San Antonio and make an investigation.

Mr. Burns' expenses may be defrayed by a public committee.

The First Story.

San Antonio, Tex., March 18.—By an explosion that shook the whole city and the surrounding country, a number of men variously estimated by the police at from eighteen to thirty were killed today in the Southern Pacific yards here. A locomotive boiler blew up, spreading death and destruction in its vicinity. Many of the dead are strikebreakers. The locomotive was standing in a roundhouse at the time and the building was demolished by the terrific detonation. Twenty other men were wounded, some of them perhaps fatally by the explosion.

Bits of iron and steel and shreds of human flesh were picked up far from the scene of the disaster.

At noon, the police declared the disaster was a rival of the Los Angeles Times dynamite explosion which was laid to the structural iron workers, and said it might even exceed it in horror.

Probe Is Begun.

At the same time detectives began an investigation among labor circles and it was evident that the authorities hoped to find the perpetrators of the wholesale slaughter among the leaders of the shop men's strike.

The explosion came without warning and at a time when there were a number of machinists, roundhouse grooms and track tenders working nearby.

The roar of the explosion could be heard for about a mile. The huge locomotive was torn asunder like a fire-cracker. Before the detonation had died away there was a rain of debris mingled with human bones and flesh from the sky. Parts of bodies were picked up from 300 to 500 feet away and windows half a mile away were shattered.

Deputies from the coroner's office collected the human flesh in baskets and carried it to the morgue. Every available policeman in the city was hurried to the scene and formed a cordon about the yards. Hundreds of excited men and boys, consumed with curiosity, literally fought to get through the gates of the high fence which surrounds the tracks.

Every ambulance in the city and all the doctors who could be found, together with the hospital corps from Fort Sam Houston, were called to the scene to care for the injured.

The police, as well as the Southern Pacific officials, were unable to make any correct statement as to the correct number of the victims. Hardly a vestige of the locomotive remained. The jacket of the boiler was blown a block away alighting between two houses on Duval street.

It weighed half a ton and when it fell it bored a deep hole in the ground. The tender was shattered.

A RICH WIDOW ENDS HER LIFE

After Being Arrested in New York for Smuggling.

HANGS HERSELF AT HOTEL BROZTELL

Leaves Note Expressing Her Regret Over Affair.

San Francisco Woman Denies Having More Than $1,200 in Valuables. Jewelry, but Officials Find Pearls and Diamonds Worth $20,000, and Arrest and Tragedy Follow. Pathetic Touch to Story.

New York, March 20.—Mrs. Edwin Carson, wealthy widow of a prominent San Francisco physician, who confessed to smuggling into this port gems worth $20,000, committed suicide today by hanging herself from the window of her room on the eighth floor of the Hotel Brozrell. Before her suicide, she wrote a letter saying she could not stand the disgrace of her arrest. In a letter to her brother, Paul R. Mabury, a banker, of Los Angeles, Mrs. Carson wrote:

"I could not stand the disgrace of my arrest. I had to work out my own salvation and I knew of no other course. Please forget about it."

Jumped From Window.

New York, March 20.—Mrs. Edwin Carson, the widow of a prominent San Francisco physician, committed suicide at the Hotel Brozrell today, twelve hours after she had been arrested for smuggling. Tying a rope about her neck, the woman jumped from a window of her apartment on the eighth floor of the hotel. Passersby on Fifth avenue saw the woman's body dangling from the end of the rope, and notified the hotel management. Hotel attaches rushed to the eighth floor and hauled the body back into the room, physicians from the New York hospital were summoned. They said life had been extinct but a short time.

Mrs. Carson arrived here on the liner, George Washington, Monday, from Paris and went to the Hotel Volcott, where she registered as Mrs. Blanche Carson, of San Francisco. When Mrs. Carson arrived, according to the customs authorities, she declared her gems worth only between $1,100 and $1,200. An investigation by officials of the port led to discoveries which brought the smuggling charge.

The investigation revealed that Mrs. Carson had really brought in pearls, diamonds and other jewels worth $20,000.

Conference Is Held.

When the under valuation was established, General Nelson M. Henry, surveyor of the port of New York, and other officials held a conference. Mrs. Carson was summoned to give an explanation. Mrs. Carson, accompanied by Harrison Osborne, former solicitor in the custom-house service, visited the custom officers and there it is alleged made a full confession, declaring that she had purchased the gems in question in India. Many of the diamonds were cut.

Mrs. Carson explained that she feared the duties would be so excessive that she could not pay them. She gave the full value of her jewels. She was arraigned before United States Commissioner Carpenter in Jersey City and held in $2,000 bail for a hearing Friday. After requesting that her predicament be kept from the public, Mrs. Carson returned to the Volcott, but immediately moved to the Brozrell.

Two letters were found in Mrs. Carson's room. One was addressed to Paul Mabury, No. 109 west Twenty-Eighth street, Los Angeles, and the other to Harrison Osborne, No. 24 Nassau street.

Lawyer's Statement.

Mr. Osborne, who had been retained by Mrs. Carson as her attorney, hurried to the Brozrell when advised of the suicide.

"Mrs. Carson," he said, "was the widow of a wealthy physician in San Francisco. She had been abroad for some time and had just completed a tour of the world, also attending the Durbar. The management of the hotel said that Mrs. Carson had arrived yesterday and applied for a very quiet room. She was assigned to No. 804, which overlooks Fifth avenue. Her baggage consisted of a steamer trunk, two bags and a large trunk wrapped about with half-inch rope. She had taken a quantity of Wolcott hotel stationery with her to the Brozrell and her last messages were written on this paper.

Mrs. Carson's last letter was dated a few minutes before she had taken her life just about daybreak. Directly across Fifth avenue, from the hotel, is the fashionable Knickerbocker apartment house. Residents of this building saw the woman's body, dressed in a night gown, sway from a window about the same time the pedestrians in the street discovered it.

Woman Leaves Letter.

"It was about 6 o'clock when we were notified of the suicide," Manager Roberts, of the hotel, said. "We went up and forced the door. We found Mrs. Carson had taken the rope from her trunk, doubled it and made a noose which she fitted about her neck. Tying the other end to a radiator pipe she had leaped from the window. The body was just eight feet below the sill when we found it."

Part of the letter written by Mrs. Carson to Lawyer Osborne was as follows:

"If you will go to the Hotel Volcott you will find in the lining of my hat a pair of diamond earrings. I had been told that I would have to pay excessive duties on these diamonds if I declared them and I did not wish to pay such charges. I am very sorry that I did not make the full declaration, and I am willing to give everything I have brought into port and pay the full valuation on the articles."

Prominent in Society.

San Francisco, March 20.—Mrs. Blanche Carson is the widow of Dr. Edwin Carson, a rich local physician. She is prominent in society here. Mrs. Carson made her home in San Francisco at the St. Regis apartments, No. 1925, Gough street, where she lived with her sisters, the Misses Mabury. She left San Francisco last year for a trip around the world, leaving in time to attend the Durbar. From India she went to Europe.

One of the Misses Mabury said this morning:

"When Mrs. Carson left here for India she had some beautiful diamonds and pearl rings. What their value was I do not know.

"We heard from her at Paris and she told us she would sail on the Olympic on the 13th. If she came to America on the George Washington, she must have changed her plans."

Mrs. Carson owns valuable property in this city.

The Misses Mabury are prominent in local society.

Woman's Brother Talks.

Los Angeles, Calif., March 20.—Paul Mabury, head of the Mabury Trust company of this city, brother of Mrs. Edwin Carson, said today that he had been informed that his sister arrived in New York Monday, and admitted that he knew there were smuggling complications, but refused to discuss the case. He said he had read press despatches concerning the smuggling episode, but was not sure that they referred to his sister.

Mrs. Carson formerly lived here, but for some years has resided in San Francisco.

Mabury said that, so far as he knew, his sister had no family trouble. He said that his sister would have no cause to smuggle anything into the United States, as she had plenty of funds.

PLAN TO HELP TAFT IN OHIO

President Endorsed at Meeting of County Chairmen.

PROMINENT STATE PARTY MEN SPEAK

An Enthusiastic Conference Is Held in Columbus.

Senator Burton Urges Militant Attitude in Pre-Convention Campaign and Is Pleased to Take Glad Tidings Back to Washington That Ohio Will Stand Loyal by Her Favorite Son.

Columbus, O., March 20.—At the meeting of the Republican county executive committeemen at the Southern hotel, resolutions were unanimously adopted endorsing President Taft and renewing the pledge of the Republican state convention of 1910 in pledging Ohio's support to the president. Preceding the adoption of these resolutions Senator Theodore Burton, L. C. Laylin, Warren G. Harding, Harry M. Daugherty and other prominent Republicans spoke.

E. A. Tinker, chairman of the Ross county committee, presented the resolutions endorsing Taft.

"Let us be militant," urged Senator Burton. "Put it up to our Democratic friends. If they get too obstreperous let us put it up to the progressives. I have been cartooned as voting with Aldrich 114 times. I want to call your notice to a man who is a prominent candidate for president, and who selected as his campaign manager a man with voted with Aldrich 126 times. I don't want to see any friction in this campaign. Let the campaign be conducted with decorum. I am glad to take back to Washington the report of this meeting and the united enthusiasm for W. H. Taft. President Taft has made a splendid record. If he has lacked anything it is the spectacular. His administration has kept pace with any that has preceded him."

Warren G. Harding declared himself "not crazy about primaries," but insisted the renomination of President Taft is in the air. He declared the opposition would unmask the batteries and help President Taft in the campaign after his renomination.

Arthur I. Vorys said "the keynote of the party in the state and nation will be William Howard Taft." He recalled the opposition to Lincoln in 1864, even in his own party, to show that the present situation is not without parallel. "I look to see the Republican party united as it has not been since 1896," said he.

Daugherty Is Insistent.

Harry M. Daugherty insisted that if Ohio Republicans desert Taft this year Ohio will lose her place as mother of presidents and Ohio Republicans will become the laughing stock in national conventions for half a century. He urged the state convention before the national convention because of the influence on the nation the Ohio platform will have. He urged chairmen to go home and organize for Taft.

Two state central committeemen, Ed Jones of the Tenth and George Hamilton of the Seventeenth, declared their loyalty to Taft, although Mr. Jones conceded Roosevelt sentiment strong in Jackson county. Chairman Huff of the Delaware county committee asked Mr. Laylin to call on him for any work he wants done in the county.

Counties that were not represented were Ashtabula, Athens, Auglaize, Carroll, Columbiana, Defiance, Fulton, Holmes, Huron, Jackson, Lorain, Mahoning, Medina, Miami, Monroe, Morrow, Ottawa, Perry, Portage, Richland, Stark, Tuscarawas and Williams.

The statewide Taft conference was composed of county chairmen of executive committees, members of the Republican state executive committee and Taft leaders. There were 62 county chairmen present or represented. Of the 26 absentees, the Taft leaders claimed that 12 were for Taft and 13 for Roosevelt.

Walter F. Brown, Roosevelt manager, issued a statement saying that there were only 48 bona fide chairmen present, and that the state law prohibiting the use of proxies had been violated.

HOUSE SETS NEW RECORD

Passes Three Important Bills in a Week.

MEMBERS HOPE FOR EARLY ADJOURNMENT

Want To Go Home Before the Conventions Meet.

Unless Senate Evinces Disposition To Take Action on Democratic Tariff Bills, It Is Belief of House Leaders That an Adjournment by June Is Assured—Views of Rank and File of the House.

Washington, March 20.—Members of the house are now hoping for adjournment before the national conventions meet. The fact that three important bills have been passed by the house within a week's time has set a new record for the session and indicates that the hurry-up fever has struck that body.

After passing the excise tax bill by an overwhelming vote, the rivers and harbors appropriation bill was called up and passed. There was little disposition either way to amend or debate the latter bill.

This measure was the third important revenue bill to go through the house in less than a week's time. The postoffice appropriation bill is next on the calendar.

The legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill is ready to come from the appropriations committee and the ways and means committee will soon bring out the wool schedule, which may be the last of the tariff revisions measures of the session.

Unless the senate soon evinces a disposition to take action on the Democratic tariff bills, it is the belief of the house leaders that an adjournment by June is assured. The house takes the position that it is needless to pass the tariff bills, which the senators propose to kill as fast as they receive them. Many of the rank and file of the house have stiff fights at home.

GAS LEAK CAUSES DISASTER TODAY

Homes at Denmore, Pennsylvania, Are Wrecked.

Scranton, Pa., March 20.—Nine persons were killed, several of them children, and one was seriously injured in an explosion caused by a gas leak in a house in Dunmore near here today. All the victims are foreigners.

Two buildings were wrecked and the dead were buried beneath the wreckage. Fire followed the explosion and the wreckage was partially consumed before the blaze was extinguished.

The dead are Mrs. John Cavello and her five children; Mrs. Vito Summa and her two children. Mrs. Summa was the daughter of Mrs. Cavello and the two families occupied the same house. The husbands are employed at night and had not yet returned home when the explosion occurred.

Columbus, O., March 20.—Trafficers in intoxicating liquor in dry territory who are certified for the payment of the Aiken law tax and penalty of 20 per cent are entitled to a refund when they satisfy the county auditor that they have ceased business. Such was the decision of the supreme court in affirming the circuit court of Coshocton county, which awarded a writ of mandamus against County Auditor Frank Mowery of Coshocton.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo Gleespen, of Carhart street, are the parents of a son born Wednesday morning.

ACCUSED WOMAN LEAVES ATLANTA

Mrs. Grace Gets Bond and Hurries Away.

IT IS FEARED SHE MAY SKIP COUNTRY

Prosecution Is Sure She Will Never Return.

Detectives Believe That If Grace Dies, His Wife Will Satisfy Her Bondsmen and Hurry to Europe. She Never Inquires as to Her Husband's Condition Before She Quits Atlanta—Grace Grows Weaker.

Atlanta, Ga., March 20.—Lawyers for the prosecution and city detectives are by no means satisfied at the hurried and secret departure of Mrs. Daisy Grace for Philadelphia last night. She left the jail in company with her attorney, J. A. Branch, at midnight and took the Southern train for Washington to settle her financial affairs and raise money for her defense. Bond in the amount of $7,500 was made by professional bondsmen before Justice Ridley after a conference with attorneys on both sides.

Chief of Detectives Lanford says he believes that if Grace dies, Mrs. Grace will satisfy her bondsmen, skip the country and never be brought back. He says the case against her is as strong as ever and there has been no reason for granting her bond and permitting her to leave the state.

Grace is growing weaker daily at the hospital and is believed doomed to certain death. Reuben Arnold, chief counsel for Grace and his family, says he doubts whether Georgia ever gets its hands on the woman again.

The prosecution lawyers insist that Mrs. Grace has escaped and will never return. It will be extremely difficult to bring her back by requisition, as she has not been formally indicted. Grace was told this morning of his wife's departure, but he betrayed no emotion whatever, and made no statement.

The release of Mrs. Grace on bond was granted despite the vigorous protest of the prosecution.

One of the pleas for her release was that she might be permitted to be near her husband and nurse him. A move to instigate an immediate investigation of the case and the returning of a true bill by the grand jury in order that Mrs. Grace might be re-arrested on her arrival in Philadelphia and brought back to Atlanta was made impossible today when the solicitor general declined to take up the case at present. On her release, Mrs. Grace made no effort to communicate with the hospital where her husband lies steadily growing worse, but was whisked rapidly to the terminal station and boarded a fast train for Philadelphia where she was due to arrive Thursday morning.

MRS. DAVID E. OGAN DIES AT RICHWOOD

Death Comes After a Long Illness of Tuberculosis.

Richwood, O., March 20.—[Special.]—Mrs. Jessie Ogan, the young wife of ex-Mayor David E. Ogan, died at her home on Blagrove street, Tuesday at 2:30 p. m. She was a sufferer of tuberculosis of the bowels and had been ill for several months. The deceased was about twenty-six years old and had been married only three years. Her maiden name was Jessie Albion and her parents died when she was a small child. The orphan was given a home by relatives in Marysville and about eight years ago she came to Richwood to reside with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Gary Meddies.

The deceased enjoyed a wide acquaintance in Richwood and Marion, and was loved by all, being noted for her winning ways and her many womanly qualities. She was a young woman of exceptional refinement. She was unusually ambitious and refused to give up the hope of living and up to within a few days before her death she planned for the future of herself and her bereaved husband.

Although the funeral arrangements have not as yet been completed, it is likely that the service will be held from the late residence Thursday afternoon. The deceased was a member of the First Presbyterian church.

DISCOVERIES AT POMPEII.

Some interesting discoveries have been made at Pompeii, the latest being the uncovering of what appears to have been a typical saloon of 1,900 years ago. In a shop on a thoroughfare which has been named by the excavators the "Street of Abundance," has been found a row of wine jars so placed that it would seem that the vintner was in the act of pouring wine from one into another, when he was overtaken by the storm of sand, ashes and cinders that deluged the little city in 79 A. D.

The jars, made of bronze and glass, are perfectly preserved, even to the liquid contents, and the money-drawer of ivory was found just as the owner left it, containing a number of silver coins. According to an eminent archaeologist, the only thing lacking is the barmaid, who, it may be supposed, managed to escape at least to the street.

Another recent discovery, more gruesome than the other, was that of six bodies lying before the gate of a superb palace, and supposed to be those of the owner and his wife, their two children and two servants. The children were found lying in one another's arms and the parents had clasped hands as they fell. These bodies it has been decided to leave where found, as silent evidence of the awful disaster which came unheralded and seized and held men, women and children in its merciless grip.—Columbus Dispatch.

WILSON MEN ARE EVER ON ALERT

Get Five to Harmon's Four Delegates in State of Maine.

Augusta, Me., March 20.—By clever political work the advocates of Woodrow Wilson's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for president succeeded in getting five of 12 delegates to the Baltimore convention. The old plan of selecting two delegates from each congressional district and four by the state at large was discarded at the suggestion of the Wilson advocates, and instead each of the districts selected three delegates. The Wilson men then carried their fight into the district conventions, where they secured the naming of five delegates who favor Wilson. The Harmon advocates, without showing any organization, succeeded in naming four men, while Champ Clark will have one admirer in the Maine delegation at Baltimore. Two are undecided.

Temporary officers of the convention were chosen as follows:

Chairman, George S. Long, Troy; secretary, George B. Christian, Marion; sergeant-at-arms, James De Vine, Cleveland.

Two presidential preference primary plans were presented. Congressman Whitaker of Canton, anti-Harmon, presented a plan which merely called for the election of six delegates-at-large to the Democratic national convention and three presidential electors-at-large, to be elected at the statewide primary May 21, when the district delegates will also be elected.

Ed Moore, Harmon chief, introduced a plan whereby any candidate for president, who presented petitions signed by 5,000 voters, should have his name placed on the ballot in the statewide primary May 21. Then the candidate receiving the largest number of votes should appoint the six delegates-at-large. Moore's plan won by a vote of 14 to 7.

Callie Garber Bonster.

After the meeting E. H. Moore gave out the following statement: "The action of the Democratic state central committee affords to the Democratic electorate of the state an opportunity for the expression of its will. It means that Governor Harmon will be overwhelmingly selected as the presidential preference of Ohio's Democracy, and that there will be a solid and enthusiastic delegation for him from Ohio. It sounds the political death knell of National Committeeman Garber and the elimination of Garberism in Ohio. The remnants of his machine will be no more successful in opposing Governor Harmon's candidacy for the presidency than it was in opposing his reelection for governor two years ago, when he was re-elected by more than 100,000 plurality."

"Mr. Garber, who has been boasting outside of the state that he will be a delegate-at-large, opposed to Governor Harmon, will not be able to get into his county convention, much less into his state convention, except as a spectator or on a proxy. I predict that it will be many years before another so-called Democratic machine can be organized in this state to make common cause with a like corrupt Republican machine."

"In order that the Democrats of the nation might be given the opportunity to know the strength of the governor in his own state, this primary plan provides for the printing of any candidate's name upon the ballot, upon the petition of 5,000 voters—less than 1 per cent of the electorate—and does not make the candidate's consent a condition precedent for that purpose, lest it might be urged that the delicacy of an outside candidate would prevent his giving that consent."

"This opportunity for the expression of the popular will, wrung from the hands of an unwilling committee, will furnish at the polls the best answer to the governor's traducers, and the best evidence of his tremendous popularity with the voters of his own party. His untiring service in behalf of the whole people has gained for him among the people of the state, regardless of party, a popularity unprecedented among public men in the history of this state."

FIVE DEAD AND NINE INJURED

As Result of Bomb Explosions at Miragala.

Oporto, Portugal, March 20.—Five men are dead here today and nine others are seriously wounded, some of them fatally, as the result of a series of bomb explosions last night in Miragala, a suburb. Two arrests have been made.

Several houses were demolished and the police are searching the ruins in expectation of recovering more bodies. Among the dead is a man named Costa, who was the leader of the party organized for the defense of the republic.

Perhaps a young widow might get rid of her weeds by marrying a gardener.

Pick June 4 and 5 as the Convention Dates.

MOORE PRIMARY PLAN A WINNER

Harmon Forces Adopt Plan of Youngstown Man.

Permits Any Candidate for President Who Can Get 5,000 Signatures to Have Name Placed on Ballot as May Primary—Governor's Chief Lieutenant Issues a Statement. Reads Garber Out of Party.

Columbus, O., March 20.—From beginning to end the meeting of the Democratic central committee was dominated by the friends of Governor Harmon, who selected Toledo as the place for holding the state convention and June 4 and 5 the dates, the same being held before the date of the national gathering at Baltimore on June 25. The anti-Harmon men wanted to hold the state convention July 16 and 17. The Harmon men hope to enforce the unit rule on national delegates at the state convention.
